The hospital reported this morning that his condition was good. The motorcycle was badly damaged.

Conservator Nash Reports Progress In Bank Reopening

Willis G. Nash, conservator for the National Ulster County Bank and Trust Co., interviewed this morning as to the result of conference held by himself and directors of bank with officials in New York and Washington, stated that he felt that satisfactory progress had been made toward the complete reopening of the bank. He added that an examiner would be in Kingston this week to make a complete examination and check-up of the bank and that when approval for complete reopening is given the public may depend upon its being on an unquestionably safe and sound basis.

Mr. Nash's statement is as follows:

"I am not able to make any definite announcement as to the result of our trip to Washington, but feel we made satisfactory progress toward the opening of the bank to normal business. Applications, such as ours, are very carefully scrutinized and checked. A new department has been organized to examine and pass upon the various plans for rehabilitation as submitted by the several hundred banks which did not reopen and conditions are different as to the several banks. The plan of reorganization must be examined by the department, the papers examined by the legal department and all checked over by the Federal Reserve Board before the final approval is given by the comptroller of the currency. We did not expect to have been able to accomplish all this in the short time we were in New York and Washington. We did, however, submit our voluminous papers to the various officers with a report as to the subscriptions we had received and we were given courteous and interested attention. It will doubtless be some days before these papers can be fully examined and approved by the several departments, but in the meantime we have been promised that an examiner will be here this week for an up-to-the minute checking and examination of the bank itself.

"We urged upon the officials of the department the importance of time, and while they agreed entirely with that viewpoint, they in turn reminded us of the importance from the standpoint of the depositors and the public that no bank should be allowed to open unless it was in a perfectly sound and safe condition, and that when the approval was finally given, the public could depend upon dealing with a bank which was once more on an unquestionably certified safe and sound basis."

Gandhi Starts Fast Death Is Predicted

Poona, India, May 8 (AP).—The Mahatma Gandhi began a fast today which he said could not be broken for three weeks even though every temple is opened to India's untouchables and "untouchability wholly removed" before then.

The wrinkled little 63-year-old Nationalist leader began the ordeal at noon in the presence of an assemblage of devotees and friends, deeply moved at the thought that he might be entering the final phase of his eventful life in his new protest against untouchability and the caste system. Doctors said the fast would mean his death.

"Every day brings me fresh justification for the ordeal which God and truth have sent me," Gandhi said after he began the fast. "The discoveries I have been making would have paralyzed me but for my fast and whatever it may mean for the cause, it will certainly be my saving. Whether I survive or not is of little moment. Built as I am, these fasts are indispensable. I confess I have no strength but what God gives me, but it has never failed me hitherto and gives me confidence that it will not fail me now."

Gandhi said the fast was intended to remove bitterness, purify hearts and make clear that his movement in behalf of the untouchables is wholly moral.

If rain interferes the program will go on in the nurses' home.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to visit the hospital on Hospital Day and observe what it is doing to help restore health. For more than a quarter of a century the Benedictine Hospital has been administering to residents of Kingston and Ulster county.

Confessed Kidnaper Had Great Heritage

Kenneth Buck, Whose Father Was An Old-Time Surfman, Doesn't Seem a Criminal to Cape Cod Folks.

Harwichport, Mass., May 8 (AP).—Kenneth Buck, confessed kidnaper of 10-year-old Margaret "Peggy" McMath, even now doesn't seem a real criminal to Cape Cod folk.

"Why," they whisper confidentially, "he's the son of an old-time surfman."

And there's no greater heritage in the eyes of a native Cape Codder than that.

Kenneth was born and bred on the Cape. He married a Chathom girl. They have an eight-year-old son—Kenneth, Jr.

It's his devotion to his son that has his neighbors wondering. It doesn't seem possible to them that a man so devoted to his own boy could be so heartless as to steal the small child of another.

Neighbors said Kenneth was never a rowdy. Most of them described him as "a quiet lad."

His dad served as a surfman in the Monomoy Point Life Saving Station—that was years ago before the coast guard took over the life saving station. The elder Buck died young and left his widow with Kenneth and four other children.

Kenneth was found with burglar's tools in his possession once. He wasn't prosecuted, for the police chief said yesterday: "You can't convict anybody in the Cape courts for just having the tools."

To be sure, he "got into trouble" for stealing tires off automobiles. But they "gave him another chance."

He's been shot at, too. One neighbor said: "I caught him peeking in the window one night and fired a .45 out the window at him. He ran like a deer."

He ran for constable at the last town election and worked hard for the nomination.

PRESIDENT OF BANK FOR INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT

Basel, Switzerland, May 8 (AP).—Leon Fraser, New York lawyer and banker, was elected President of the Bank for International Settlements today, being promoted from the vice-presidency to succeed Gates W. McGarrah, also of New York, retiring president.

Mr. McGarrah, who retires after three years as president, was elected honorary president of the bank and a member of the board as long as he remains in Europe.

These decisions were taken at the monthly meeting of the directorate, preceding the third annual general meeting of B. I. S. members who reviewed the annual report of the bank showing, despite the hard times, a profit of 14,200,660 Swiss francs. This is approximately 1,000,000 francs less than the profit reported a year ago.

Milk Control Board Plans for the Public Hearing Wednesday

Albany, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—Determined to fix a retail minimum price for milk to the farmer in spite of the loud opposition of one militant group of dairy producers, the state milk control board today made ready for its public hearing next Wednesday.

Formal notice of the hearing was given last night to the people who drink milk, the dealers who sell it and the farmers who own and milk the cows. In its hearing order the board declared its intention to fix minimum prices "which * * * may vary according to varying uses, forms, classes, and grades, locality or zone in which milk is produced and the market in which it is sold."

This is the point of contention which caused a group of 156 dairy farmers at Syracuse last Saturday to vote to withhold their milk from the public on Friday of this week if the board has not acted by that time to suit their demands. This group, in common with others organized under the leadership of Albert Woodhead of Rochester, has called for a fixed minimum price of 2½ cents per quart to be paid to the farmer at the farm, over and above any costs of transporting the milk to market.

Woodhead, their leader, was head of several hundred dairy farmers who withheld their milk from Rochester consumers several weeks ago.

Members of the milk board have explained that they do not see how a fixed minimum price can be set for milk at the farm, because of a number of things. One objection was that the farmer who lives a long distance from market would find himself lost in the shuffle. A Utica dairyman told the milk board at its last hearing with the farmers that dealers, having to pay the fixed price anywhere, would confine their purchases to those farms from which milk transportation costs would be less.

The board's hearing order fixed the time of Wednesday's hearing at 9 a. m. eastern standard time, and the place the first floor of the state office building in Albany.

The hearing, the board said, is "for the purpose of supplementing, altering, devising and (or) amending any and all official orders heretofore promulgated by the board, and (or) for the purpose of exercising its power under section 312-subdivision (D) of the Milk Control Law by fixing by official order the minimum prices to be paid by milk dealers to producers and others for milk as defined in the law (including cream and condensed or concentrated milk, except in hermetically sealed cans) * * *."

The board, whose chairman is Charles H. Baldwin, state agriculture commissioner, already has fixed minimum prices to be paid by the public on the basis of 10 cents a quart for milk delivered at the doorstep.

Believe $1,500,000 Fire Was Incendiary

Ellsworth, Maine, Scene of Blaze That Laid Waste to 175 Buildings 300 or 400 Homeless.

Ellsworth, Maine, May 8 (AP).—A fire, believed by authorities to have been of incendiary origin, laid waste a large section of this county-seat city during the night with a loss estimated at $1,500,000, and leaving 300 or 400 residents homeless.

Dawn today showed a blackened desolate area where approximately 175 business houses and residences had stood. The Red Cross chapters from Bangor and Bar Harbor moved in to care for the destitute.

A company of National Guardsmen from Bar Harbor arrived soon after daybreak to assist the 160 special policemen, sworn in during the night, to guard the devastated area.

"We all think it is incendiary," Chief of Police John A. Stuart said.

"I examined the building in which the fire started only a few days ago. It was in good shape and had nothing combustible about it. Some people say they saw two men running away from the building after the fire was discovered. I have been so busy I have not had much opportunity to investigate anything of that sort."

Efficiency Of Police Head Recalls War

Harwichport, Mass., May 8 (AP).—Kenneth Buck got the ransom money for the return of Margaret McMath Friday at 3 a. m. Thirty hours later he was under arrest. And before dark the entire amount—$50,000—was in the hands of the State Police.

The swiftness of it all reminded one newspaperman of World War days, when General Daniel C. Needham, head of the State Police, was a field artillery lieutenant.

Needham was an observer with the 161st Field Artillery of the 26th Division. The newspaperman was a war correspondent with the same division.

Needham's battery was firing. One over, one under and the third shot square on a German battery—the absolute minimum in ranging.

Five Witnesses Were Called to Testify in Murder Action Today

Quick Murder Trial Resumed in Court This Morning—Witnesses Testify Concerning Broken Car.

The Quick murder trial was resumed in county court this morning and at the morning session five witnesses were called.

Alfred Dingey of Mettacahonts, the truck driver who took Baessler to Kerhonkson on the evening of January 22, after Baessler's car had broken down at Catsout, hill, was the first witness examined. Mr. Dingey said he had known Baessler by sight from being at the restaurant but he did not know either Conner or Mrs. Fish until the night he took Baessler home and on the road picked up Mrs. Fish and Conner. He identified Conner as the man whom he had picked up and taken to Kerhonkson and said that he had seen Mrs. Fish in the jail and she was the woman whom he had given a lift that evening. Dingey was returning from Shokan on January 22, and near Catbush hill he overtook the Baessler car, which was being towed. The witness said he knew Uriah Quick and knew where he lived. The place where he overtook the Baessler car was about a mile from Quick's place.

When the car was towed to the top of the hill, Baessler asked him to take him over to Kerhonkson. The road, he said, was very muddy and he had some trouble getting his truck through. From the top of the hill Baessler steered his car while it was towed to Kromis and there placed in the yard. At that point Baessler got on the truck and rode in the seat until Conner and Mrs. Fish were overtaken near the Ben Rider place. There was no conversation on the way until the two were overtaken and then Baessler asked Dingey to pick up Mrs. Fish and Conner. Mrs. Fish took a position in the cab and Baessler and Conner rode in back in the truck box. It was about 11 o'clock when they arrived at Baessler's restaurant. Baessler paid $2 for the trip and the three entered the back door of the restaurant.

The witness said he had seen Mamie Fish in jail and she was the same woman he picked up.

Cross examined Mr. Dingey said the Baessler place was dark when they arrived. At that time Dingey was working for Osterhoudt Brothers as a truck driver. When he picked up Mrs. Fish he had not noticed whether she wore rubbers or not. Mr. Dingey said he returned home after leaving Kerhonkson. He estimated that it was 300 or 400 yards from the Backinoff place that Mrs. Fish and Conner were picked up. They had not hailed the driver of the truck but Baessler asked him to pick them up. Mr. Dingey said he knew where Baessler lived when Baessler asked him to drive him home.

Cross examined by Mr. Lounsberry the witness said he lived over two miles from Quick's.

On the way down to Kerhonkson and while Baessler was in the car with him Mr. Dingey said he smelled Baessler's breath and it smelled like liquor. He did not smell any liquor on the breath of Mrs. Fish when she rode on the seat with him after being picked up.

Albert J. Givens, Kerhonkson garage man, told of having known Baessler for over three years and also Conner. On January 23, Monday, he said Baessler came to his garage about 7:30 or 8 o'clock in the morning and asked him to go and get his car. At that time Baessler drove Ed Rose's car. Mr. Givens said he had just opened the garage and was waiting for his partner to come. Baessler insisted that he go immediately to Mettacahonts and get the car which he said had broken down the night before. Mr. Baessler was insistent and Givens closed up the garage and with Baessler went to Kromi's place and towed the broken down car to Kerhonkson where repairs were made to the rear end. On arrival at the place where the car was he placed the spare tire on the front left wheel which was without a tire and borrowed a pump and added air. The car was then towed to Kerhonkson to the garage. It was about 9 or 9:30 that Baessler left going toward Kerhonkson.

Again about 5 o'clock Baessler came to the garage with a tire which had been purchased at Montgomery Ward and Company's store. He asked Givens to place it on the car. At that time Conner was along. A half hour later he returned and told Givens to deliver the car at the restaurant when finished. Mr. Givens said he delivered the car around 6 o'clock. He parked the car and went into the rear door and into the room where the counter was but saw no one. He made a noise and Conner and Baessler both appeared from somewhere in the rear.

Baessler told Givens he would pay him next Wednesday as he was to take Michael Conner to Stamford that day. It was at the first trip in the morning that Baessler told of having to take Conner to Stamford. At that time he said he wanted the car that day as he would use it to take Conner to his home. He told Givens that he and Conner had had a fight. It had happened because Baessler had gone to Mettacahonts Sunday and left Conner in the restaurant but Conner had not stayed.

Cross examined Givens said when Baessler came in the morning he told of having to take Conner to Stamford Tuesday and at that time said he would pay the garage bill Wednesday. The bill has not yet been paid. Baessler was alone in the car when he first came to the garage in the morning. It was around 5 o'clock that afternoon that Baessler and Conner came to the garage and when they drove away they went toward Wawarsing. They were gone about half an hour when they returned and Baessler asked Givens to deliver the car to the restaurant. There had been no conversation between Baessler and Conner while they were at the garage that afternoon.

Edward Rose of Kerhonkson, a tenant in one of Baessler's houses, was the next witness. He said he lived over the garage where Baessler kept his car. Rose also keeps

Alleged Kidnapers Plead Not Guilty, Bail At $100,000 Each

Cases of Kenneth and Cyril Buck Adjourned to May 22 After Pleas of Not Guilty Were Entered—Kenneth Buck Says Someone Else is Involved in the Affair—Says He Was Left to Take the Blame.

Provincetown, Mass., May 8 (AP).—Kenneth and Cyril Buck, brothers, pleaded not guilty today to the kidnaping of ten-year-old Margaret McMath. Kenneth asked a continuance of his case and agreed with District Attorney William Crossley on May 22, but Cyril asked an immediate hearing.

The cases of both, however, were continued to May 22 and each was ordered held in $100,000 bail.

The two brothers were taken back to the Barnstable jail.

District Attorney Crossley, in addressing the court, described the case as one of "the greatest importance" and of a nature requiring heavy bail.

He pointed out that in murder cases defendants are not permitted to be released on bail and that if the commonwealth's contentions are correct, kidnaping may be a great deal worse than murder in many cases.

"I respectfully ask the court to set bail at $100,000 for each prisoner," he said.

Judge Robert A. Welsh, 30-year-old jurist, sitting on his first important case since his appointment a few weeks ago, considered the argument for several moments.

"Mr. Crossley has referred to murder cases," he said. "This is not a murder case. But kidnaping is one of the most heinous crimes there is because of the worry and mental strain on those affected by it. After due consideration, I set the bail at $100,000 for each prisoner and continue their cases until May 22".

Provincetown, Mass., May 8 (AP).—While sitting in the prisoners' box awaiting arraignment for the kidnaping of 10-year-old Peggy McMath, Kenneth Buck today told reporters that there was some one else involved in the crime who ran away and left him to take the blame.

With Kenneth in the prisoners' box was his brother, Cyril, also held for the kidnaping, but Cyril remained silent.

Kenneth was asked: "Is it true that there is some one else in on this case?"

"Yes, there is," he replied and began to sob.

"I am between them and my wife," he continued, "and I don't know what to do. I know I didn't do it and she knows I didn't do it. I am between them and my wife and I can't say anything."

Kenneth was then asked if he meant the "someone else" went away and left him to take the blame.

"Yes," he said, "they ran away and left me."

Asked if the "someone else" was a resident of Harwich, he said, "No". Then he broke down and was unable to answer further questioning.

Reveals Government "Partnership" With Industry Is Sought

President Roosevelt Seeking Solution to Economic Problems Plans to Improve Wages.

Washington, May 8 (AP).—A government "partnership" with industry to improve wages, shorten working hours and control surplus production will be President Roosevelt's next move in attacking economic adversity.

He revealed this last night in giving the nation a full exposition of his policies, past and future, for domestic and international recovery from the depression.

Similar to the measures already proposed for government cooperation with agriculture and transportation, the President would put the force of government behind trade agreements under a relaxation of the anti-trust laws.

Seated at a desk in the White House, Mr. Roosevelt also gave notice that he would use the powers about to be given him by Congress to provide inflation "when, as, and if it may be necessary to accomplish the purpose."

"The administration," he said, "has the definite objective of raising commodity prices to such an extent that those who have borrowed money will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of dollar which they borrowed. We do not seek to let them get such a cheap dollar that they will be able to pay back a great deal less than they borrowed.

"In other words, we seek to correct a wrong and not to create another wrong in the opposite direction. That is why powers are being given to the administration to provide, if necessary, for an enlargement of credit, in order to correct the existing wrong."

There is every indication Mr. Roosevelt will employ promptly the provision in the inflation bill providing for government purchase of outstanding government bonds as a means of making millions, now invested by banks in these obligations, free for industry's use.

His declaration that "well considered and conservative measures will be proposed" for industrial supervision was regarded as meaning that something new in the way of legislation would be advanced in the place of the 30-hour work week bill now pending in the House.

An unofficial committee, headed by Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.), has virtually completed the drafting of a plan for self regulation by industry through a relaxation of the anti-trust laws and is expected to put it before the President this week.

But five new cases of measles were reported to Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, the past week, bringing the total number of cases in the city since the first of the year to 1,230. Every indication points to the fact that the epidemic is waning fast here.

New Kind of Tire Gives Blow-Out Protection Free

TODAY'S high speeds—40, 50, 60 and 70—generate terrific heat inside your tires. As a result, rubber and fabric begin to separate. A blister starts . . . and GROWS . . . bigger and bigger . . . until BANG! A blow-out. And you're headed for trouble or worse!

But now Goodrich has perfected the amazing Life-Saver Golden Ply. This new invention—an exclusive feature of the new Goodrich Safety Silvertown Tire—resists the most intense heat. Rubber and fabric don't separate. Thus blisters don't form inside the tire. The cause of blow-outs is eliminated beforehand.

The tread, too, is safer from skidding. Its famous squeegee drying action gives your car extra road grip and reduces danger of skidding to a minimum.

Best of all, the new Goodrich Silvertown, with the Life-Saver Golden Ply, costs not a single penny more than standard tires. So why take chances? Put a set on your car NOW!

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

Gratitude Takes Strange Turn.

Vienna—Before Baron Franz Nopcsa, explorer, took his own life, he shot and killed his secretary, who had once saved the Baron's life. In a farewell note the explorer explained he could not bear to leave his faithful helper "ill, miserable and penniless."

Wolf! Wolf!

Chicago—Desk Sergeant Rudolph Josephson took down the telephone receiver and listened to Lowell Wooley speak as follows:

"There's Wolf at my door."

Laughing the sergeant advised the caller to feed the wolf a bowl of soup and forget about it, but Wooley insisted on action. Two officers were sent to his home. They captured a coyote—or prarie wolf—escaped from the zoo.

Rosina the Marvelous.

Brescia, Italy—Nothing in the barnyard is too good for Rosina, hen extraordinary. Every time she lays an egg, she lays another for good measure. Experts found nature had given her a double set of egg-producing equipment.

Ask Him, He Knows.

New York—An encyclopedia in brass buttons has been stationed at the crossroads of the world. The police department has erected a booth in Times Square, with a policeman inside who knows almost everything. People ask him such questions as "What's the best cure for chilblains?" and "How do I get to Joe's Place?" The only question that leaves him cold:

"Could you lend me a dollar till tomorrow?"

Tony's Wife.

New Britain, Conn.—Anthony Niewiez told police his wife came back after a ten years' absence, but her visit was neither prolonged nor welcome. She stood in the yard, he said, hurled a stone through his window, and fled.

The Cat's a Hero.

Rhinelander, Wis.—George Holmes, aged settler, owes his life to his cat. Aroused from his sleep when the cat jumped upon his bed, Holmes found his cabin in flames. He escaped.

Stumped By Golly.

New York—A tax on blood? An inquirer stumped local officials by asking if a new state sales tax applies to blood sold for transfusions. Albany has been asked to make a ruling.

And How!

Baltimore—Barbara Lee Sweig, four years old, fell down a 35-foot well into five feet of water.

She clung to a rope which hung there until help arrived.

When she was brought up, her head bleeding and body bruised, she looked down and sobbed:

"Oh, I got my new shoes wet."

No Fun, This.

San Francisco—Applause rippled as Kathleen Healy dashed across the stage and plunged into the orchestra pit. Laughter broke out, "great comedy," decided the patrons. But Miss Healy, a tight-wire performer, didn't think so. She had just come face to face with a lion in her dressing room. Police and firemen herded it back into its cage.

DISTRUST AMONG NATIONS HAMPERS WORLD RECOVERY

New York, May 8 (AP).—Some of Wall Street's leading financial experts express as keen an interest in the disarmament conference in Geneva as in the forthcoming economic conference at London.

Economic nationalism, they say, can scarcely end so long as war threatens. It is the threat of war, perhaps more than anything else, which makes each nation anxious to make itself economically self-sufficient, thus throttling the flow of trade between nations.

France, Germany and Italy, it is explained, are paying their farmers huge bounties to grow wheat, when the product and produced on a large scale in Canada, the United States, and Argentina, is available in the world markets at a fraction of the price maintained in those European countries.

In the United States, there has been a movement to provide a domestic source of rubber, or its equivalent. The labors of the late Thomas Edison in that direction were recalled. At the same time, the great rubber producing regions of the world in the Malay Peninsula and Brazil were suffering from record low prices, far below calculated costs of production, and huge stocks that could not be sold at any price.

Size of Manchuria

Manchuria, which is governed as an independent state under the domination of Japan and called Manchukuo, has an area of 363,610 square miles and a population estimated at 25,000,000.

House Expected To Back Wallace Plan

Washington, May 8 (AP).—The powerful Democratic forces of the House were thrown into line today to support Secretary Wallace and place the administration farm relief-inflation bill in President Roosevelt's hands within 48 hours.

Rejection by the The House of the Norris-Simpson cost of production guaranty amendment, to which Wallace is opposed, would place the issue squarely up to the Senate. Leaders predicted the Senate would vote to abandon its stand for the amendment by tomorrow at the latest, thus completing congressional action.

Agreement has been reached on all of the other far-reaching proposals contained in the huge omnibus measure. Under it Wallace would be given wide latitude in attempting to increase the farmers' income and the President would be given unprecedented authority to expend the nation's credit and currency. Both are prepared to act at once.

John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers Union and representative of the Farmers Holiday Association which has called a farm strike for May 13, is the chief proponent of the cost of production amendment. He has said that if Congress would approve it the farm strike would be called off.

Our Richest Presidents

The richest of our Presidents have been Washington, Hayes, Theodore Roosevelt and Hoover. Former President Hoover is usually considered to be the richest man to have held that office, and Theodore Roosevelt the second in wealth. Washington's wealth was chiefly in lands, much of which was unsalable, and though he was one of the four richest men of his time, it is difficult to estimate the value of his fortune. Hayes had a large private fortune, estimated at a million. Taylor, Polk and Buchanan were other rich Presidents.

Veils Are Becoming More "Flippant" Than Formerly

Veils are more flippant than ever. They are found on tailored or formal hats, accented for color, pattern, or manner of wearing. They may be any length from eye to shoulder. The most piquant novelty is the Talbot style, the veil tying under the chin.

Narrow belting ribbon in tailored effects of two and three colors is remarked in recent collections of millinery importations.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MAY 8, 1933.

CONGRESSIONAL VACATION.

President Roosevelt wants Congress to finish its special session work and adjourn by the end of the first week in June. The congressional school would let out about the same time as the other schools, for a long and well-earned vacation. Congress, especially the Senate, may have other ideas about it, but will probably agree. Most of the big things are already out of the way. Others are moving rapidly. There has been rarely good teamwork between the White House and the Hill. The work hasn't been done by the administration, either, with Congress serving merely as a rubber stamp. That was true only of one or two of the first emergency measures. In substantial accomplishment, Congress will have got far more done in three months than it usually does in two years.

It takes many minds to make laws, but few to administer them. With the reconstruction measures once enacted, providing plenty of power and with it plenty of leeway for the administration, the purpose of the new set of plans can be best served with the Executive Department free to act unhampered. The country, with Congress agreeing, has decided to try a governmental process new in some ways, to meet unprecedented conditions. It should have a fair chance.

RAILS UP.

Railroads have joined the bull market. There is a surprising and significant rise in railroad stocks and bonds since the inflationary movement began to register on the Stock Exchange. Apparently security-owners are not frightened by the prospect of forced "co-ordination" and more drastic federal control. In former times, railroad executives and owners both would have been scared to death, and stocks would have gone tumbling.

This wholesome response reveals alike the growing hopelessness of the railroads in recent years and the new respect for government as a directing power in industry. There is widespread conviction that the whole transportation system can stand a good deal of "co-ordinating". Also a good deal of cutting out dead wood, duplicated plants and useless trackage, and in many cases the amputation of a few top stories of capital structure. After that, under modern management in the interest of the public and the country as a whole, they may foster business and even make money again.

ECONOMIC EDUCATION.

In response to a real demand for information on many puzzling subjects, publishers—and authors—are getting out numerous works on inflation, banking, scrip, and so on. An economics professor who also writes a newspaper column on business, says that no less than a dozen books along these lines have come to his desk in a single week recently.

The reader has only to glance over book review columns and publishers' advertising in newspapers and magazines to see how numerous these are. On the other side of the Atlantic the output is just as great. John Maynard Keynes—who sounded a warning immediately after the war in his "Economic Consequences of the Peace"—Sir Arthur Salter, Sir Josiah Stamp and others of international fame keep right on writing books explaining everything.

How widely are these volumes read? How much influence on the trend of events do they have? That is hard to estimate. They do not all agree among themselves as to remedies. One thing seems certain. Their readers are getting doses of education in subjects to which they paid little attention before the depression. Jane Addams once spoke of "education from the current event." That is what we are getting these days, with the books referred to available for those who want further light after reading the papers.

An illuminating remark comes from Charles A. Miller, former president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He is not of the party in power, and not enthusiastic about some of the things now being done at Washington, but he says: "Even the impending inflation, which seems to be necessary rather than voluntary, may turn out to be a good thing, in spite of our old conservative economic notions. If the new radical school of economic thinking can get us into a worse scrape than the old-fashioned conservative did, I shall be surprised. Our economic future is in our own hands. It is our duty to give the President loyal backing and not to expect miracles from him. He may make mistakes. But the only way to be sure of avoiding mistakes in this crisis is to do nothing, which would be the greatest mistake of all."

ABDOMINAL PAIN.

You have a pain in the abdomen and you naturally are anxious not to make any mistake as to whether or not it is appendicitis or other surgical condition. On the other hand you don't want to needlessly alarm your family if the pain is due to something that will easily correct itself or can be relieved by some simple home drug like baking soda.

If the condition is due to something that is not of a surgical nature, by waiting a little while it is likely to pass away. On the other hand, again, you know only too well that if it is of a surgical nature delay is very dangerous.

How then are you to know just what to do?

Generally speaking, as in everything else, if in doubt, consider it the serious condition because if you are right you have taken things in time, and if you are wrong you should be relieved to know it is not the serious condition and you are only at the expense of the doctor's examination.

But there are times when you are not able to get the examination, too far away from a physician or no physicians within call at the time.

What are you to do under these conditions as you wait and likely wonder what is likely to happen?

Dr. J. B. Helms, Morgantown, N. C., gives a little rule that may be of help to you under the circumstances, and enable you to decide just what to do.

He says "Persistent abdominal pain (pain that continues in the same spot for a long time) which is followed by nausea, vomiting, and difficulty in moving the bowels is almost always surgical. This means that at all costs a surgeon should be summoned as operation is your only chance of safety.

On the other hand, where there is nausea, vomiting, perhaps diarrhoea, headache, general weakness and chills, which is followed by abdominal pain, it is almost always a condition which requires no surgical help, but can be relieved by medicine.

Thus when the pain comes first and the vomiting and other symptoms afterwards, it is a surgical condition, and when the vomiting and other symptoms come first and the pain afterwards it is not a surgical condition.

Remember, this is just the general rule, to which there are always some exceptions. If a doctor is available, call him in.

The White Cockatoo

by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: In answer to a solution of the two murders that have occurred in their small French hotel, and the two attempts on his own life, Jim Sheldon confers with Lorrie Lee, a detective. They agree the events are part of an attempt to secure the token by means of which Sue Tully will claim her share of her father's huge fortune. Lorrie and Sheldon separate, and after making sure no guests are abroad in the house Sheldon searches it carefully. Suddenly he discovers that he is being stealthily followed.

Chapter 21

EYES IN THE DARK

IT WAS as if some ghost had taken a fancy to haunt my footsteps—disturbed possibly by my intrusion into his rightful domain, for if ever a place looked haunted it was that rambling old hotel.

And then I felt a presence more definitely. And I'd no sooner realized it than, out of the tail of my eyes, I caught a sort of movement on the lower gallery.

It was only a flicker, and it was gone, though I leaned far out to look.

Yet, Madame Grethe, Mrs. Byng, and Sue were still in the parlor, and I took the pains to walk to the elevator shaft whence I had a view of a part of the lobby and could see Lorschiem still bending over his desk. I could not, however, see beyond the door to the bar, so the only alternative was the suspicion that Father Robart was my ghostly companion.

I had become, by that time, very circumspect in my actions, and I took greater caution about opening doors into supposedly empty rooms and was careful not to outline myself against any windows, thus providing a target.

Had I needed warning, which I did not, the silent, dark little elevator hanging there at the ground floor would have supplied it.

But, as I say, I was little wiser, and the one definite clue—which I was not, as a matter of fact, at all certain was actually a clue—was as impalpable and ghostly as was the feeling of a menacing presence stalking the dim-stretching corridors with me, just out of my sight and reach.

I found it when I visited the two rooms, thirty-four and thirty-five; from the window of one of the two I had caught that wild glimpse of a haggard and terrible face. The face which I refused to believe was Sue, which she herself unwittingly denied, and which still was so like—so terribly like her face, with the square-cut hair framing it, page-like.

Neither of the rooms appeared to have been occupied for some time. They were both cold and unaired and musty. It was only accident that I took my way across the heavy carpet of the latter, and going to the window, pulled back its curtain and squinted in an effort to see through the slits in the shutters in order to discover just how much of the second-floor corridor, directly opposite and across the court, the watcher's gaze could have encompassed.

I realized at once that I couldn't see through the shutters satisfactorily and was reaching out my hand to pull back the doors of the window and properly unlatch the shutter when my hand arrested itself in the very act.

The shining glass was cold; the shutters behind it dark. My breath against the glass had misted a small patch, and in that little patch suddenly I saw very clearly the whorled imprint of fingertips. Four of them and a thumb.

They were very clear, sharply definite. They were spread as if the hand had pressed heavily against the glass. And they were small and slender. No man's hand had made them.

FIVE small fingerprints. The question was, When had they been made? And, more urgently, Who had made them?

The possible significance of the little prints—prints that with a breath and a touch of my cuff I could everlastingly destroy—drew my attention from my surroundings.

Fortunately the door creaked. I've often wondered what might have happened if it had not creaked. Things might have been very different. But it was old and hadn't been opened and closed much in its last years, and the hinge creaked.

I'm sure I saw the door move. I'm sure I caught the glint of a moving high-light in that darkish room. Then I flung toward it, pulled it open, and was in the corridor.

There was, however, nothing but dimness and mustiness and increasingly shadowy walls and dark carpet winding past blank doors. Nothing.

And, as it proved, those ghostly little fingerprints and never a need to be photographed and tickered and carefully documented.

They served their purpose wholly in their own ghostly fashion and added their own small link to the gradually accumulating sequence of the chain that was so strangely woven and was in the end so dreadfully like a noose.

The incident of the door had finally convinced me of the folly of lingering unarmed about those dark stretches of halls and unmanned rooms, and I returned speedily to the second floor and to my own room.

Once there, in the welcome light, with the shutters open to their fullest, I convinced myself once and for all that the clumsy, enormous wardrobe was merely an enormous, clumsy wardrobe and nothing else, and that there was no secret or hidden entrance to my room.

With an aching shoulder I emerged into the corridor. It was dusk by that time, and I had an impression of lights in the court below.

I knew, now, the general plan of the hotel; I knew the locations of the various tenanted rooms; all on the second floor. I had not, it is true, penetrated the storerooms in the wing below my own room; the time had been too short.

I knew that the switch box was exactly where Mrs. Byng had told me it was, and that she could scarcely have failed to recognize Sue.

I knew that the priest's room was off an intersecting corridor not far from the angle where I'd caught a disturbing glimpse of a moving shadow on the previous night.

And I knew about the fingerprints which I had not destroyed.

BESIDE me was the door into the White Salon. I had opened the door, I remembered, in the darkness of the night when the odor of tobacco smoke had roused me. I opened it again and stepped inside.

The shutters were closed, and in the dusk I could see little. I found and pressed the switch, but there was no bulb in the high, ornate crystal chandelier.

As my eyes adjusted themselves to the gray gloom, however, I could make out objects—carved armchairs and sofas, and a heavy gilt mirror above a large fireplace, and in one corner a great piano that loomed up darkly, so large that there was a sort of cavern of shadow under it.

The Pope's piano, undoubtedly. Its dark unwieldiness and the look of waiting that an old piano always has—as if it were patiently waiting for the hands that had once touched it—gave the last touch of morose somberness to the room.

I went out hurriedly, closing the door sharply behind me to shut in that waiting piano and those waiting chairs, and I wished the dimly cavernous White Salon with its musty air and its silence were at a happier distance from my own room.

Momentarily I paused in the long narrow corridor with its closed doors on one side and its glass wall on the other to look, as somehow I always did pause to look, down into the court and over the whole sweep of surrounding windows and encircling walls.

Lights were on in the lobby. The light was already swaying under the entrance arch, and thus above the gate that was not yet closed. Two policemen were in the court, huddled under their capes and leaning against the inner wall, which sheltered them to some degree from the wind.

Lovschiem and Grethe were in the lobby. I could see into the parlor, since the light was shining there and the window facing the court yet unshuttered: Mrs. Byng and Sue were still there.

I turned and walked along the north corridor, turned into the main section of the hotel, and started again toward the corridor running to the elevator.

The whole upstairs was silent and deserted and unbelievably empty. My footsteps made no sound on the carpeted corridor. Then it was, I suppose, that as I passed the closed door to Sue's room I distinctly heard someone moving about beyond it.

And it could not be Sue, because I had just seen her sitting there in the parlor.

All Safe

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"What has happened?" cackled Top Notch, the Rooster, as he came up the road.

"You're safe!" they all cried.

"Safe? Of course I'm safe," Top Notch answered. "Why wouldn't I be? I'm a sensible Rooster. Don't you know that 'Early to bed, early to rise, makes a Rooster healthy and wise?' Of course in the old saying they speak of being wealthy too, but if I have health and wisdom I can get along all right."

"But, Top Notch, we were so worried," Willy Nilly said.

Suddenly Top Notch noticed the fire engines. "Has there been a fire?" he asked.

"A fire!" they repeated. "We've had a terrible time, and then we thought you were missing and that you had been suffocated. Where were you?"

"Well, I decided after all that I would not sleep here as it was so crowded, and one more is one more when a place is crowded. So I went down to the shed. I got up a long time before dawn—I suppose before the fire had started—and went over to call on some of my friends in the barnyard in the next village.

"They gave me a fine breakfast, and we all cackled about business conditions and I said they were getting better all the time with all the things to be picked up from the ground these spring days. They agreed with me and then I left to come home, and here I am. I'm sorry I worried you so much."

But none of them thought about the worry now. They were all safe, every single one of them. And their dear Top Notch, Mayor of Puddle Puddle, had been found.

CHINESE FLEE TO LWANCHOW BEFORE JAPS

Tientsin, May 8 (AP).—Chinese troops fled today before the second Japanese-Manchukuan offensive to be aimed in the direction of this city within a month.

Fears were expressed that this time the advancing forces might continue all the way to Tientsin.

A bold attempt to assassinate a representative of the Manchukuan government at a Peiping hotel yesterday was not calculated to help matters any. Two Chinese broke into the room of the man, who was registered as Chang Shih-Heng, and shot him so severely that physicians today despaired of saving his life.

Talks to parents

Self-Satisfaction

By ALICE JUDSON PEALE

The young child needs to be well pleased with himself. He needs to think of himself as lovable, good and capable of achieving anything he really attempts to do.

Consider the case of the child who has not this sort of self-satisfaction. He feels himself to be unlovable, the result always of not having been loved. He has no reason to try to please those who do not love him, and lacks therefore the greatest incentive for being good.

Having no reason for wanting to be good he is as bad as possible unless he is punished, with extreme severity. Painfully aware of his general incompetence as compared to the strong capable adults who surround him, he is discouraged from trying to become independent and skilful.

It is clear that children have need of a large measure of self-satisfaction. The smaller they are, the more ignorant and helpless really, the more they need to be pleased with themselves; for only, being so pleased, do they keep the good-will and self-confidence which enable them really to profit by the training to which they are subjected.

For this reason the little girl who innocently announced upon looking into the mirror that she had a "sweet face" and the little boy who came to his mother, boasting about having climbed a certain tree higher than any of the other children, needed no lecture on modesty.

The world gradually takes care of the process of puncturing the child's fictitious claims to superiority, but it does this usually by merciful degrees.

Meanwhile the child's character has developed so that we no longer speak of self-satisfaction, but of the self-respect which grows out of it—a quality, the value of which is never questioned.

A WASHINGTON DAYBOOK.

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—Predictions made quite a while ago that the grand old game of politics—so markedly abandoned since March 4—was soon due for a revival on capitol hill apparently were well founded.

BERTRAND SNELL

At least it appeared so to those who sat in the galleries of the house the day that the senate sent over the farm bill with the currency inflation amendment for action in that body.

It was the first real test between the two floor leaders of the house—Bert Snell of New York, the republican general, and Joe Byrns of Tennessee, the democratic chieftain.

The two, both veterans of the house, haven't had much opportunity thus far in the special session to lock horns. Republicans and democrats alike have been working in the closest harmony most of the time that the President was working out his emergency program.

Came The Battle

Inflation, however, was another thing. Snell and his aids had been mapping their plans for days. Encouraged by the stiff opposition offered in the senate to the inflation amendment by Reed of Pennsylvania and others, Snell was ready to fight to the last.

Joe Byrns' idea was to get the matter before the house immediately and have it done with. It was assured of passage. Votes had been counted in the house long before and victory assured.

Snell knew this, but refused to let the democrats go ahead.

He was getting tired, he said, of having the congress be nothing more than a rubber stamp for the President. Here was a piece of legislation, one of the most important ever to come before the house. Members had a right to have sufficient time to consider it, he contended.

Byrns agreed. He started out by offering Snell three hours of debate, raised it an hour as Snell became more insistent, and finally offered him five hours.

That wasn't enough, said Snell. The house should have at least two days.

Using The Whip

They wrangled and threatened. Byrns had the whip hand. He knew that it would be a simple matter to call his rules committee together, report out a special rule for the bill cutting down debate to a minimum.

Reluctant as he was to use his big stick, Snell finally forced him to it. A special rule for legislation always brings forth the cry of "gag" in the house—an unpleasant sound to all leaders.

There'll be a lot more said about this in the future. It begins to look as if the political truce is definitely off now. The grand old game of politics seems due for a lusty and prolonged run.

Hunting-Fishing Changes Announced In Conservation Law

Albany, May 8—Important changes in the Conservation Law particularly with reference to the open seasons for the taking of wild game were made at the recent session of the State Legislature and have become effective during the past week through the signing of a number of conservation measures by Governor Lehman.

The most far-reaching of the new laws changes the dates of the open seasons on almost all varieties of game which may be taken in this state. Following are some of the changes:

Deer: The new season in most of the counties in which deer may be taken will be from October [illegible] to November 15, instead of from October 25 to November 15.

Bear: The same as deer.

Black and Gray Squirrels: October [illegible] to November [illegible] instead of October 25 to November 15.

Varying hares and cottontail rabbits: October 15 to January 31, instead of from October 25 to January 31.

Grouse or Partridge: October [illegible] to November 15, instead of October 25 to November 15.

Wild Pheasants: The Monday immediately preceding October 31 to the following Saturday, instead of during the last six days of October. This does not change the length of the season or its general period, but merely provides that there shall be no intervening Sunday.

Quail: In Sullivan, Orange, Dutchess, Putnam, Westchester and Rensselaer counties, from November 1 to November 15, inclusive, instead of from November 15 to November 30. The Long Island season is unchanged.

Open seasons for migratory birds are fixed by Federal regulation and are usually changed from year to year, but the United States Government does not announce these seasons until August.

In a separate bill signed by the Governor, it is provided that raccoons may be taken in Cayuga, Tompkins, Tioga, Wayne, Seneca, Schuyler, Chemung, Ontario, Yates, Steuben, Monroe, Livingston, Allegany, Orleans, Genesee, Wyoming, Niagara, Erie, Cattaraugus and Chautauqua counties from November 10 to January 20, both inclusive and muskrats may be taken in the same counties from December 20 to March 20, both inclusive. In other counties the season remains the same as before.

The Governor has also approved a new section of the Conservation Law absolutely prohibiting the taking of any animal by means of a snare or contrivance consisting of a noose or cord, wire or other material by which an animal may be taken or entangled.

Another bill just approved by the Governor provides that field meets or trials for dogs may be held from September 1 to May 1 under permit from the Department, on wild or liberated game and at any time on liberated game under permit of the Department.

Still another bill exempts eels from the existing prohibition against the sale of fish taken in Lake Champlain.

Under a bill just signed by the Governor, the area of the Hudson river in which smelts and tomcod may be taken is extended to its entire length instead of being confined to the area below Ver Planck's Point, as at present provided.

The Governor has also signed a bill which provides that only residents of states which permit a similar privilege to the fishermen of New York state may be granted licenses to fish with nets, beam trawls and otter trawls in the tidal waters of the Marine district.

A bill simplifying the regulations for labeling containers for oysters and clams and providing that no retailer may remove such labels until the contents have been disposed of, has also been signed.

Another amendment to the Conservation law extends the area in which dredging for skimmer clams is permitted by including the waters of Fort Pond Bay and Neneague Bay, south of a line from Culloden Point to Doll Point, Suffolk county.

Another bill also signed prohibits the taking of fish in portions of the Nissequogue river in Suffolk county except by angling and regulating the use of nets in taking shad in other portions of this river.

Of unusual importance is the bill just signed by the governor forbidding the transplanting in New York state waters of seed or mature oysters of any species other than those technically known as Oster Virginica. This bill is designed especially to prevent the introduction of the Japanese oyster.

The governor has also signed the Conservation Fund bill, which provides that all revenues of the division of fish and game shall be segregated into a special fund which the legislature is obliged to appropriate for the support of the division, thereby making his division entirely self supporting. Under an amendment made toward the close of the session, this provision is applicable for only one year, at the expiration of which the old method of segregating only half of the revenue in the conservation fund will again become applicable. The department now collects in hunting, fishing and other licenses and in fines considerably more than $1,000,000 a year, and the total expenses of the division have not in recent years exceeded the total amount collected.

Bills recently signed by the governor affecting other divisions of the Conservation Department than the division of fish and game include an amendment to the Conservation Law authorizing the department to lease oil and gas rights on lands purchased for reforestation purposes. Several plots thus acquired have been found to contain oil and gas and this may bring some revenue to the state.

Another important bill extends the authority of the department [illegible] to eliminate the [illegible] to the same extent as now exists in [illegible].

The governor has also approved a number of [illegible] due to the operations of the Water Power and Control Commission [illegible] division of the department.

Among the conservation bills vetoed by the governor was one permitting [illegible] houses and golf farms to hunt and fish without a license within a [illegible] of their [illegible]. The governor also vetoed two bills dealing with [illegible] game breeders which were contradictory. Another vetoed bill [illegible] would have permitted the use of eel nets in taking fish along certain sections of the south shore of Long Island. The bill permitting the taking of whitefish in Lake Erie by gill nets was also vetoed. Several minor special sectional bills governing hunting and fishing were also vetoed. A bill permitting netting in Lake George was also vetoed.

At the lower left the jacket of tucked mousseline has tiered ruffled sleeves and a flattering long rever collar. The point d'esprit collar at the lower right is bow pleated in two layers and finished with an organdie bow.

Pleats A-Plenty

New York—If you want to be among the sartorially elect wear pleats. If possible have them around the sleeves, if not in the actual sleeve.

Pleats come and go, and when gone never are not long in returning. This season they are widely dispersed and more inclined to appear above the waist than below. In other words, pleats return, not via the usual skirt route but in more novel forms. The illustration gives you an idea of one of the smartest ways they are used. Note the extended shoulders, called "trays" you know this season. It is one of the many Schiaparelli tricks we have learned to do rather well.

If anything will wean women away from prints, it is pleats. Why women should want to be weaned away from them is beyond most of us who like to see the seasons definitely marked by what women wear.

Prints always look cool whether they are or not, and certainly always look gay, and if for no reason let's have prints galore this summer. There is of course no reason why prints should not be pleated.

One of the most interesting ways of introducing pleats, and one of the most interesting varieties, is the cartridge pleat, a type particularly appropriate for materials with enough backbone to hold their position.

Silhouettes have been getting straighter. We find, particularly among sports and tailored things, a tendency toward rather short skirts with kick pleats, released in the general neighborhood of the knees. This type of skirt looks straight even if it isn't, and that's always an asset. As skirts grow straighter they show a disposition to grow shorter—not much, but just enough to comment on and to make the distinction more marked between sports and dress-up clothes.

Packing—A New Problem

New York—As the summer collections unfold their cheerful and sprightfully fashions for that most buoyant of all seasons, with the sponsoring of light colors and bright patterned fabrics, it is clear that the wide shoulder which has become a style hobby of this season must continue even in the sheerest and softest of fabrics.

It is interesting that in these groups the width which is a distinctive characteristic of square shoulders is attained in the softest treatments of ruffles, doubled flounces and tiers. The fact that these in soft sheers such as chiffon can be folded and packed where the ruche shoulders and colarettes will become crushed and rather distorted is in their favor.

Forget About Indians

Almost the first thing that strikes a visitor's imagination in the Black Hills or the Rocky mountains is the thought of Indians. That same visitor, however, can ride through the thickly populated, well-farmed districts of Kansas without ever mentioning the subject. Yet there were practically no Indian battles in the Colorado Rockies, and the number of settlers killed during the entire history of the Black Hills would not equal the killings for one year during the building of the K. P. railroad in that district of Kansas which now is passed by the tourist without ever a thought of olden times!—Tit-Bits Magazine.

B. C. Postal Systems

In Julius Caesar's time the service of couriers in the portions of the Roman dominions under his control was so well organized that of two letters which he wrote from Britain to Cicero in Rome, the one reached its destination in 26 and the other in 28 days. There certainly was an efficient postal system in the Rome of the Emperor Augustus, about 31 B. C. The Emperor Diocletian is credited with setting up the first postal system for the use of private persons, as distinct from public officials, generals in the field and other officers.

Dr. Walter B. Cannon of Harvard says: "It is not generally known that in former times smallpox was commonly a disease of children, so much so that it was called 'child pox.'"

OFFICE CAT

By Junius

I am the best friend you ever had.

I am knee about with sweet memories of brides, memories of mothers, memories of boys and girls, memories of the aged as they grope their way down the shadows.

I am decked with loving tears crowned by happy hands and hearts. In the midst of the great men of earth I find a constant dwelling place.

I safeguard man through all his paths.

I lift up the fallen. I strengthen the weak. I help the distressed. I show mercy, bestow kindness and offer a friendly hand.

I am good fellowship, friendliness and love.

Some time, some day, some hour in the near or far future, you will yearn for the friendly touch.

I am your comfort and best friend.

I am calling you know.

I AM THE CHURCH.

Judge—Have you anything to say before I sentence you?

Prisoner—No. Please hurry, judge, or, I won't get to jail in time for dinner.

Juliette—When Harold ate some of my cake he was simply carried away.

Marie—Gracious! Couldn't you get a doctor to the house in time?

HARD TO IMAGINE—

A really silent partner.

The office really seeking the man.

A man who enjoys a good joke on himself.

Ham or bacon without eggs in a restaurant.

A circus without peanuts and pink lemonade.

A tired business man sleeping at a musical comedy.

A movie half as good as the press notices about it.

A telephone operator who gives you the correct number promptly.

A public speaker who isn't addressing the most intelligent audience he ever had.

FLAREBACKS. . . A virtuous person is one who can find something wrong with the most innocent things. . . . Fools throw kisses; wise men deliver them in person. . . . Some people's idea of a newspaper is one that will cuss everybody else but them. . . . Some people are always prominent at fires and funerals. . . .Some folks have the stuff; others have only the stuffing. . . . A grouch travels a hard road. It's a smiler who has smooth sailing.

Man—You seem to make light of your financial troubles.

Neighbor—Yes, I burn all my bills.

A lawn is like many people. The greener they are the easier they are trimmed.

Jensen—Everything that's bought goes to the buyer, doesn't it?

Hanson—No. Some things, such as coal, go to the cellar.

Visitor—Poor fellow! I suppose you were tempted and fell?

Convict—Yes, lady—tempted by a handbag, and fell over a dog.

Judge—You are both found guilty. Have you anything to say before I pass sentence?

Male prisoner—I'd like it better, if you could postpone my dear wife's term till after I come out.

GAS BUGGIES—Embarrassing Moments.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Back in Hollywood after an eventful year and four months' absence, Gloria Swanson thinks she may stay a while, but for her immediate screen future she has no plans.

Inveterate traveler that she is, there has been scant opportunity to enjoy the spacious home in Beverly Hills she bought about 12 years ago, and even now she isn't certain that she won't run back to Europe. Her little boy and girl are in school in Switzerland.

"They're so far away," she says, "I sometimes think I'll be getting on a boat to go to them any minute. I didn't want to bring them with me this time because of the uncertainty of my plans. Their governess—we've had her for 13 years—is with them. Still, I don't like being so far away."

Mother Looks Ahead

Glamorous Gloria is in private life very much the adoring mother. She already has planned the children's education. They had American public schools first — she brought them to Europe only to have them near her—then will travel, spend a year perhaps in school in each of several foreign countries, then an American college for the boy and a finishing school for the girl.

"I believe in travel," says Gloria, "perhaps because I love it so. I've been going somewhere after every picture, since about 1921. Almost every year, except 1930, I've gone to Europe. It's grand to be home, though. Perhaps," she laughs, "I may settle down some day."

It was on her latest jaunt to England with her husband, Michael Farmer, that their baby was born, in London. And then she decided she might as well make a picture there. "The Perfect Understanding" was the result.

Her Next Picture?

Since their return Gloria has been busy attending to legal matters that cropped up abundantly during her absence—too busy to think about pictures, although her United Artists contract calls for a new appearance within the year.

"I'll be making one," she says, "but when or where I don't know. I have no plans. It may be here, it may be Europe—maybe it'll be in China—who knows?

"But I have decided one thing—my next picture is going to be heavily dramatic."

CHECK-UP SHOWS WHAT GOVERNOR DID WITH BILLS

Albany, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—A check-up today shows that Governor Lehman signed 766 and vetoed 281 of the 1,050 bills passed by the last session of the legislature. Three measures were recalled after they reached the governor's desk.

In approving or disapproving all of the bills before the end of the 30 day period allowed for such action, the governor departed from the course of his predecessors who usually left scores of measures for the automatic "omnibus veto."

We like to hear a man talk religion, but we'd rather see him live it.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

PETER RABBIT FINDS HE HAS SOMETHING TO LEARN

Don't ever get the foolish habit
Of knowing all, like Peter Rabbit.

IT IS a bad habit, this habit of thinking you know all there is to know. It is a bad habit because it is almost sure to get you into trouble, or to make you appear foolish in the eyes of your neighbors, or something like that. Peter Rabbit is very apt to think that because he runs about so much he is a very wise person and knows about all there is worth knowing, which is, of course, a silly idea. Nobody knows all there is to know, or a millionth part of all there is to know. So you'll find that those who really know the most say the least about it.

It just happened that Peter had run over to the Green Forest just in time to overhear Happy Jack Squirrel say something to his cousin, Striped Chipmunk, about the quickest tempered person of his acquaintance. "For his size he has the biggest and worst temper of anyone I know of," declared Happy Jack. "And did you ever in your life see anyone eat as he does?"

Instantly Peter was all ears, as the saying is. "Who are you talking about?" he demanded.

"I don't know that it is any of your business, Peter," replied Happy Jack promptly. "However, if it will do you any real good I was speaking of Short-Tail the Shrew."

"Short-Tail the Shrew!" Peter said it over to himself in a puzzled way.

"That is what I said," snapped Happy Jack rather sharply.

"But there isn't any such person," said Peter. "I mean there isn't any such person around here."

Happy Jack stared at Peter with all his might. He stared so that it made Peter uncomfortable.

"What are you staring at me so for?" asked Peter, wriggling uneasily.

"Do you mean to say, Peter Rabbit, that you don't know Short-Tail the Shrew?" asked Happy Jack slowly, as if he couldn't possibly believe it. "Do you mean to say that you don't know one of your nearest neighbors?"

"I guess I know everybody around here there is to know," said Peter. He, too, spoke sharply. "If there is anybody around here I don't know they must have just moved in. Short-Tail the Shrew, whoever that is, never has been a neighbor of mine. If anyone knows his neighbors I guess that one is me. I don't know anybody by that name. I guess you are talking just to hear yourself talk."

Now Happy Jack might have felt that he had reason to make a sharp reply, for Peter's way of speaking had been most provoking. I suspect that he meant it to be provoking. You see Peter wasn't quite sure, as he pretended to be, that Happy Jack didn't know what he was talking about. Yet he wouldn't admit, not even to himself, that he didn't know all there was to know about the things around him and about his neighbors and their doings. He simply couldn't and wouldn't believe that there was anyone of whom he didn't know who lived near enough to be called neighbor.

But Happy Jack didn't get angry. He just laughed. He laughed and he laughed. And the more he laughed the more uncomfortable Peter felt. Peter suspected that beyond a doubt he had something to learn.

Gets 25-Year Term With Year to Live

Chicago.—The law took a more optimistic view of William O'Brien's future than did surgeons.

O'Brien, thirty-two years old, was sentenced to 25 years in prison for the slaying of William Walsh in a gun battle that followed an attempted looting. O'Brien was brought into court on a stretcher. He is paralyzed from the waist down from a bullet fired by a policeman in the battle.

Physicians say he cannot survive more than a year. Prosecutors insisted that he receive at least a 25-year sentence.

BETRAYS FRIEND WHO TRUSTED HIM

Write an End to 34 Years' Confidence—in Jail.

Chicago.—Thirty-four years ago an eager boy of thirteen years walked into the law office of Attorney Patrick J. McArdle and asked for a job. McArdle had just opened his office and his budget did not include an office boy, but impressed by the boy's alert manner he hired him.

During the hours of leisure McArdle freshened his knowledge of law by instructing the boy, who proved an apt pupil. As the business grew the boy performed his duties ably until he won the affection of his employer.

McArdle looked upon him as a younger brother and later as a son. He sent the boy through law school. When the boy completed his course and became Attorney Anthony J. Schmidt, McArdle gave him space in his suite at 30 North La Salle street, although he did not enter into partnership with him. The attachment grew with the years.

Recently McArdle appeared in the office of Chief of Detectives Schoemaker. He asked for two policemen to make an arrest. When he attempted to tell why he wanted the men his voice broke with sobs.

McArdle went to his suite, flung open the door to Schmidt's office and said, "Arrest that man." McArdle sank into a chair. Schmidt bowed his head.

"Several weeks ago people came to see me about Schmidt and told of being victimized by him," McArdle said. "At first I would not believe them, but at last even I was convinced. The final proof was a real estate mortgage which he sold me four years ago for $2,500. On investigation I learned that no such property existed."

"Look at this," McArdle said to the policemen. He produced his will, which included a bequest of $5,000 to Schmidt. He tore up the will as Schmidt was led away by the detectives. Later he was charged with embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretenses.

Genuine 'Coon Hunt At Local Court House

Big Raccoon Scurried Up Drain Pipe Sunday Night But Hunters Found No Trace of Animal Today.

Game protector Burton M. Castle, equipped with the latest devices for the scientific capture of coons, accompanied Night Jailer Lyman Ellsworth to the jail-house this morning for an inspection of the roof. The object of the expedition was to find out whether or not the big raccoon that scurried up the drain pipe Sunday night and was last seen peering over the cornice was still on the roof or had succeeded in making his way back down to earth. Apparently the latter was the case for there was no trace of Mr. 'Coon this morning.

The animal was first seen about 11 o'clock Sunday night by Jailer Ellsworth, who heard a scratching near the window at the rear of the receiving desk where Deputy Frank O'Reilly sat dozing, thinking something would turn up. Ellsworth, guessing that a genuine 'coon hunt was being brought right to the door, or rather to the window.

Lyman grabbed up a flashlight and ran out in between the two buildings, where he saw the coon running along the stone ledge some five or six feet up from the ground. When the light was turned on the animal the latter lost no time in getting to the drain pipe which runs up the corner to the top of the building, went up the pipe as easily and quickly as though it had been running on level ground, scrambled over the projecting cornice and then turned and looked down at its pursuer.

There was a technical discussion this morning at the sheriff's office as to whether the 'coon could back down the pipe as easily as he went up, or had jumped down from the roof of the top of the corridor that runs from the jail to the court house, and from there had made his way down to the ground.

Several well defined footprints on the window glass remain to prove that it wasn't all a dream.

African Gray Parrot

The African Gray parrot, when properly cared for, may live as long as any of the parrots once it has become acclimated to the locality in which it is destined to spend the greater portion of its life. But the percentage of loss in shipping this species from Africa, and while it is in the hands of dealers, is so great that they are much more costly than most other kinds of parrots.

Mr. Grice and Mr. Grisdale

In Anglo-Saxon times a pig was called a "gris." When people began adopting surnames many keepers of pigs adopted such names as Grice, Grisdale and Grise, from their occupations.

Legion Reception At Old Armory Tuesday

The old Armory, at the corner of Broadway and Hoffman street will be the scene of a big reception Tuesday night of the Ulster county organization of the American Legion when Dr. George J. Lawrence, New York State Department Commander and Mrs. Florence Schmidt, state President of the Ladies Auxiliary will be the distinguished guests of the organization.

Originally planned as a dinner-dance at the Governor Clinton Hotel the plan was abandoned Saturday afternoon when it was realized that it would be impossible for the members to turn out in great numbers. County Commander Bob Browning immediately busied himself with arrangements to hold the affair at the old Armory and through cooperation is able to announce that the plan has met with widespread approval. It is expected that a crowd of some five or six hundred Legionnaires and members of the Auxiliary will attend.

The plan is to stage the affair as a monster county meeting with the State Commander and State President of the Auxiliary as the honored guests. Each of these guests will make an important message to the boys. Dr. Lawrence will undoubtedly discuss the Legion's place in the present economic situation as it applies to veterans and this feature alone is expected to draw a vast amount of interest.

At this writing arrangements are being made to secure the services of the Kingston Post Drum Corps to add color to the affair but owing to the fact that the drum corps is preparing for its summer campaign, actual acceptance has been deferred until the drum corps meeting tonight.

Dr. Lawrence and Mrs. Schmidt will arrive in the city tomorrow afternoon and will be guests at an informal dinner at the Governor Clinton at 6:30 p. m. Legionnaires and members of the Auxiliary are invited to attend this informal gathering. At the conclusion, the Commander and State President will be escorted to the armory for the meeting and reception.

Arrangements are being made to move the ring at the armory so that the big drill shed will accommodate the number of Legionnaires and Auxiliary members expected to be present. Suitable seating will be provided and dancing will follow the meeting. An orchestra, originally obtained to provide music at the dinner-dance, will be there to furnish the syncopation.

County Commander Browning has urgently requested that Legionnaires turn out in great numbers to welcome the State Commander and Mrs. Stanley Matthews, county president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, has also requested that members of the Auxiliary also be present to honor their state president.

It is expected that several distinguished members of the legion will be present, including Maurice Stember, State Adjutant; John Lowther, Thirst District Chairman, and many others. Included in the list of Auxiliary officers invited will be Mrs. Bettie Francisco, district chairman, and Mrs. Ida Ashby, state secretary.

To Recover Treasure Of Murdered Czar

London, May 8 (AP).—The London Herald reported today that a treasure worth £2,000,000, belonging to the murdered Czar Nicholas II and prominent Russian noblemen, will soon be recovered at Sverdlovsk, on the Asiatic side of the Ural mountains.

The czar's family was slain at Sverdlovsk, then known as Ekaterinberg, after the 1917 revolution.

The cache was long known to the London agent of some of the owners, the Herald said. The agent sent three representatives, one of whom was a London banker, to obtain the treasure.

The representatives were reported to have negotiated for 15 months with the Soviet government with the result that the latter agreed to turn over one-fourth of the treasure.

The treasure is said to be buried at a considerable depth under a house where it was placed 16 years ago by a man not known in Russia. The Soviet government is said to have guaranteed him safe conduct to Sverdlovsk.

The Herald reported discovery of the treasure was made but that it would not be dug up until the arrival of the man who buried it.

Chamber Music

Chamber music is music written to be played in a small room or hall by a small group of instrumentalists and is familiarly applied to solos, quartets and quintets. The first musician who wrote any chamber music of importance was Joseph Haydn, who wrote about 83 string quartet compositions. Next in importance came Mozart and then Beethoven.

City Sealer Bares 68 Ways Public Is Cheated

Chicago.—There are at least sixty-eight different ways to gyp a customer and Chicago merchants have been using all of them, City Sealer Joe Grien said.

A butcher, he said, kept a ten-ounce lamb rib tied to his scales. Another used paper padded with salt pork which he slipped on and off the scales with the wrappers.

Pieces of iron were found inserted in poultry. Some merchants used fractions to confuse the buyers. Grocers soaked berry boxes in water, then dented them so they would hold fewer berries. Old gold buyers used scales that had never been tested.

Even the bootleggers were "short-weighing" their customers, said Grein. They sold alcohol in "five-gallon" cans which really held only four gallons and a quart.

Georgia Woman Hurt in Odd Automobile Crash

Hampton, Ga.—Mrs. E. L. Sheridan was injured in a strange accident here. An automobile from the sheriff's office, which was chasing a suspected rum running car at the time, crashed into the Sheridan automobile. The impact hurled Mrs. Sheridan from the front seat into the rear seat. Then, when the Sheridan car crashed into a parked automobile from its impetus, Mrs. Sheridan was hurled feet first through the windshield of her car.

Victim Talked Too Much; Loses His False Teeth

El Paso, Texas.—E. L. Bryant is cured of protesting to robbers.

Not only did two men take his coat, vest and $1.75 in cash, but made him take out his false teeth and hand them over.

"The robbers saw the gold in my teeth when I opened my mouth to protest and made me take them out and give them up," Bryant complained.

Look at Gun Frightens Kansas Rabbit to Death

Lawrence, Kan. — William Fortner believes he may have found the very rabbit which lent its name as a synonym for timidity. Hunting along a dirt road with Charles Barter, he encountered a rabbit face to face, hopping toward them. Fortner swung his gun to his shoulder. Both hunters assert the rabbit took one scared look, then toppled over dead without a shot having been fired.

Many Make Mistakes on Age of Rare Furniture

It is not unusual to hear some one speak of seeing or having a Chippendale, Hepplewhite or Sheraton table or chair that can be traced back over 200 years; but if a few dates are remembered many mistatements may be avoided, writes Edith B. Crumb in the Detroit News.

The "Big Four" of the Georgian period, Chippendale, Adam (Robert and James), Hepplewhite (or Hepplewhite as it was sometimes spelled) and Sheraton could not possibly have created furniture 200 years ago as their work was brought to perfection between 1750 and 1800. Chippendale was born in 1710; Robert Adam, 1728; the date of Hepplewhite's birth is not of record, but it was between that of Adam and Sheraton; Adam was not born until 1751. So it is no small wonder that the age of a piece is sometimes questioned.

Chippendale was a very colorful figure in England in his time. He had plenty of competition, but he was a good advertiser, his magnetic personality making it possible for him to surround himself with the means of identifying furniture in his style. First there is the splat back, showing the influence of the Dutch design, the splats varying in their decorative effect; then the Chinese influence, showing more geometrical motifs, and then the ladderback chair, a very simple but attractive one and one that is copied a great deal today.

Financial and Commercial

New York, May 8 (AP)—Reacting favorably to the address of President Roosevelt, and denial of rumors that France would leave the gold standard, financial markets resumed their advance today.

Trading was quieter in shares, but many issues advanced 1 to more than 2 points, cancelling much of Saturday's loss. Cotton reacted rather substantially, then recovered. Wheat showed a good undertone, moving narrowly.

Issues up 2 to 3 points included American Can, American Telephone, du Pont, Case, United Fruit, and others, while those up around a point included U. S. Steel, National Steel, Goodyear, General Motors, National Biscuit, Procter and Gamble, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, New York Central, Public Service of N. J., Consolidated Gas, Owens Illinois, Dome, Kennecott, and others. Oils were steady to firm.

Continued good reports from the steel industry helped the market. "Steel" said operations should reach or exceed 40 per cent of capacity this week. At that level, Wall Street estimated that the industry might come out of the red for the first time in a long time. How long that rate could be maintained, however, with the approach of summer, was regarded as a matter of conjecture.

President Roosevelt's remarks regarding the new attitude toward the anti-trust laws, which would prevent small minorities within industries from unsettling the entire group by a cut-throat price cutting, were interpreted favorably. Oil quarters, particularly, were encouraged.

Santa Fe, reporting last week's movement of freight, showed a recession of nearly 2,000 cars from the previous week, but was about 400 cars over the like week of last year.

HIGH HAT TREND IS GAINING IN FAVOR

Paris Shows Chapeaux With Crowns Up 8 Inches.

Fashion has gone "high hat."

In the midst of many showings displaying hats with crowns so that they touch the top of the head, Mme. Agnes has bombshelled hat news by displaying chapeaux with crowns from four to eight inches high.

A number of the smartest women in Paris have followed her lead and several modistes are adopting the high hat trend by trimming crowns with high standing feathers or aigrettes.

One of the smartest designs is a turban of gold lame with a crown ten inches high which can be crushed to a height becoming to the wearer. Turbans of black satin, navy blue crepe and light hued grosgrains with little scarfs to match are also seen.

All brown, brown and white and black and white novelty straws are in the majority.

BRIMS THAT DIP

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Hats are becoming more and more brim-conscious as the season advances. Just because the season is still young brims are carrying on rather timidly but wait and see what the summer will bring in the way of wide picturesque brims. The characteristic thing about immediate brims is their way of dipping flirtatiously over the right eye. Each of the hats shown here perform the "trick" with a gesture of ultra chic. The model at the top is of peau d' ange shantung which has been allover stitched with brown in a sort of radiating-from-the-center movement. A garniture of velvet flowers encircles the crown. The other chapeau is of black loosely woven straw of satiny sheen. It has a draped band of capucine velvet ribbon set into the crown ending at the side over and under the brim with sprightly twin bows. The moral of this story is that it behooves fashion's followers to see to it that their spring hats are trimmed with a touch of velvet, either velvet flowers or some such.

STYLE NOTES

Boas of white organdie petals are worn.

New styling calls for pleated apron effects.

Buttoned-down-the-front dresses are good style.

Vivid handkerchiefs enliven the sports costumes.

Corsage flowers repeat the colors of the print frocks with which they are worn.

Fur Novelty Capes Are in Favor for Spring Wear

Little fur capes which just cover the shoulder blades are offered by many designers as smart spring wraps. They are generally made of some novelty fur such as leopard, panther or pony and designed to button just under the left ear.

One smart spring costume combines a frock of beige wool with a little cape of leopard skin, a brown sailor hat, bag and gloves cuffed with leopard.

Powder Crepe Is Latest Fabric for Spring Dress

Outstanding among the new fabrics for spring is a powder crepe which is very like its name. Two colors woven together make the surface of this sheer silk look as if it were sprinkled with grains of powder.

The crepey weave with its frosted finish lends this fabric a subtle smartness for spectator sports attire, or for the "occasional" dress in town.

What Rosalie Wanted

By ALICE DUANE

© 1933, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

DUSK was settling down on the campus of Triwell college on the day before commencement as Rosalie Dale stole—or tried to steal—quietly across one of the side paths to her dormitory. But it was hard for anyone as vivid as Rosalie, even in the gray dusk of a mid-June evening, to go anywhere unnoticed. At any rate, Tom Johnson saw her slender, white-clad figure as clearly as if it had been illumined by the sunlight of midday.

"Hello, Rosalie," he said, striving for nonchalance as he puffed breathlessly from his watching place across Rosalie's path.

"Oh, Tom," said Rosalie, in a voice like heavenly music to Tom's ears, "is that you?"

"Well, yes," said Tom, and then felt the awkward inadequacy of his reply. "That is to say, Rosalie," he went on, making matters worse with his fumbling speech, "I've got something to say to you."

Strange, thought Tom, how impossible it was for him to speak forcefully and effectively to Rosalie. Tom had won more than one intercollegiate debate. But when Rosalie, small and lovely and gentle, stood before him, he could not talk.

But this was his chance—his last chance, he told himself bitterly, as he stood tongue-tied and ill at ease before Rosalie.

"Rosalie," said Tom, "I want you to marry me."

"Oh, Tom," exclaimed Rosalie, "how unexpected this all is!"

"Don't tease me, Rosalie. You know you haven't give me a chance. You know I'd propose to you once a week, if you'd let me."

"If I'd let you, Tom? But I haven't time tonight. Tomorrow, as perhaps you've heard, is commencement. And I've a thousand things to do between now and day after tomorrow morning when, at twelve sharp, we sail for a vacation trip abroad. You know all about it. It's Dad's graduation gift to me. And I've got to write some letters and pack and get my clothes arranged for tomorrow and wash my hair and—"

"Yes, and then sail right out of my life and maybe meet a duke or a count or something like that and marry him before I ever see you again."

"Perhaps. Who knows?" said Rosalie lightly. "You'll come and see us in our castle on the Rhine, or wherever it is, won't you Tom?"

Tom stood stiffly, angrily before her. "Cut out the foolishness, Rosalie. Be serious for once. I've got to talk."

"All right," said Rosalie, soberly. "I'll be serious. Only I'll do the talking. I won't marry you, Tom. And I don't want you to propose to me. I've tried to show you that I didn't. I don't want to settle down, Tom. I want to go places and do things and have a good time without a schedule to follow, for once in my young life."

"Well, of course, Rosalie. Of course you're going abroad. But why can't you promise not to get engaged while you're gone? If you won't promise now to marry me, promise that—just to hold off till autumn when you come back."

"No go, Tom," said Rosalie softly. "I suppose—well, if I loved you, it would all be different, wouldn't it? But all this—" she waved her hand vaguely about—"is so dull and uninteresting. I want something exciting, different. It's final, Tom."

And she was off down the darkening path toward her room.

Two months later, Rosalie, a lovelier Rosalie than ever, was sitting on the broad, stone terrace of her hotel in Switzerland, watching the lengthening light of the late afternoon strike across the distant mountains, throwing the valleys into shadow. At Rosalie's elbow, on a small wicker stand, was a newly opened box of roses with a note from a most prepossessing young German of position and wealth. Beside the roses was a partly eaten box of chocolates with the card of a delightful and important young member of the Swiss government. Two or three books, a gift from a British army officer on holiday, were on the stones beside her. But Rosalie looked at them all, and at the glorious mountains, with distaste.

Just then she heard a well-remembered voice, and looked up to see a hotel attendant pointing her out. And there was Tom before her.

"Why, Tom!" said Rosalie brilliantly, seeming tongue-tied before him.

"I've come to compete," said Tom. He glanced sternly at the offerings beside her. "Are you engaged, as yet, to any of these birds?"

Rosalie shook her head mutely.

"Good," said Tom. "I've borrowed enough money from my father for this trip, and however long it takes, I'm going to win out. I'll make myself over—doll up in any clothes you like, and do the things you want to do and everything. And then—well, Rosalie, I can see how a girl like you would like all this better than things back home. But I'll change; and then I'm going to take you back with me."

Rosalie stood before Tom. "But, Tom," she said, "I don't like it better. I'm tired of it. And I like you just as you are." She patted the wrinkled sleeve of his coat and looked happily at his rather tousled hair. "Tom, let's get married next week and have a little honeymoon and then go home and begin to pay off the debt to your father."

Paris Gave American Artist Belated Honor

The portrait of Whistler's "Mother" was hung in the Louvre in 1926. It is the first picture by an American artist to hang in the great French gallery.

In 1891 Whistler was induced by Georges Clemenceau to sell the canvas to the French government. It was then placed in the Musee du Luxembourg, that gallery having been for many years the chief repository of the government's purchases in contemporary art. It is a rule that a picture must remain there until at least ten years after the death of the artist. Then, if the authorities choose, it may enter the sacred portals of the Louvre.

Whistler parted with the painting only on the condition that it was to find a permanent place in the Louvre after the required lapse of time. He received $620 for it, which up to that time was the highest price the French government had ever paid for a contemporary painting. In addition he was given the Legion of Honor. Whistler died in 1903.

In the summer of 1925 the painting was stored, along with the others of the Jeu de Paume, in the cellar of the Luxembourg to make room for a Rumanian exhibition. In May, 1926, a place was made for the celebrated portrait in the Louvre itself, a belated fulfillment of the French government's agreement with the artist.

Gift to City of Washington

The park known as Meridian Hill, a gift to the city of Washington, includes about ten acres. The cost was $470,000. It was bought by the United States government under condemnation proceedings. It appears that there was not sufficient money to purchase the ground and the late Colonel Blount, an old resident of Washington, made up the deficiency.

Five Witnesses Were Called To Testify

his car there. Mr. Rose has known Baessler about six years and Conner longer. Mr. Rose said he could not recall whether Baessler's place was closed on Sunday, January 22, or not. He recalled Baessler coming to his place and asking to borrow the Rose car on Monday, January 23. This was not uncommon. Baessler had used the car before.

It was between 7 and 8 o'clock Monday that Baessler asked to borrow the car. He said his had broken down the day before in the mountains. Later that morning the witness had seen Baessler at the restaurant. It was around 9 or 10 o'clock. Mary Fish was in the rear of the car and Baessler was unable to start the car. Rose assisted and drove away. He did not see them leave. Around 6 o'clock that evening Rose said he went to Baessler's place. Conner was there. Givens came with the car around that time. Mr. Rose said he remained at Baessler's place two or three hours that evening. Baessler and Conner talked and fooled during that time and there was no evidence of ill-feeling. They played cards as a pastime and drinks were served by Baessler. The witness said he recalled two rounds. Conner paid with a $5 bill.

It was during this visit that Conner told Baessler that he would give assistance if Baessler needed it, the witness said. Conner had said "in a way" that he would help out Baessler.

Mr. Rose said he believed that Conner was fooling as he was a great hand to fool. Conner was always generous and the witness had seen Conner buy drinks before.

Mr. Rose said he did not notice any evidence of a quarrel between Baessler and Conner at that time. Conner, he said, had the appearance of a man who had been drinking.

Cross examined by Mr. Lounsberry the witness said he had formerly lived at Granite. He said he knew Baessler well and had visited at Baessler's and had gone to various properties which Baessler owned. He had seen Mrs. Fish and also Uriah Quick in the Baessler restaurant at times.

That evening Baessler was drinking liquor and Conner drank beer.

Asked if it were not true that Baessler and Conner were drunk, the witness said both had been drinking but he could not say they were drunk.

"Can you recall a single instance for a month prior to January 22 when you saw Baessler sober?" asked Mr. Lounsberry.

Mr. Murray objected to the question and the court sustained the objection.

Asked if Baessler was not drunk on January 23, the witness said "he had been drinking".

Daniel McGrane of 19 West Strand, Kingston, proprietor of a lunch room, said he knew Baessler and his wife. He knew Baessler two or three years and also knew Mrs. Fish. He knew her five or six years.

On January 23 at about 11:30 o'clock in the evening Baessler came to McGrane's place and asked for Mamie Fish. McGrane said Mrs. Fish was upstairs and he called her and she came down. Baessler and Mrs. Fish sat down and talked 20 or 30 minutes. McGrane went out and heard none of the conversation.

Next evening about the same time Baessler again came and talked to Mrs. Fish. Baessler said he had been to the hospital to see his wife.

On Wednesday, January 25, Baessler again came to McGrane's and asked for Mrs. Fish. Again they talked for half an hour.

On Thursday, January 26, around 7 or 7:30 o'clock Baessler and Fred Rose came to McGrane's. Mr. McGrane said Baessler wanted him to go to the Elks' Club and play shuffelboard but he could not go. Around 11 or 11:30 Baessler returned and he and Mrs. Fish talked together. They went out for about five minutes. That was the last McGrane saw Baessler.

Cross examined the witness said he had known Baessler and his wife and they had visited his place together. Mrs. Fish had accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Baessler to his place.

Next came Vernon Brodhead who is employed by Mr. McGrane in his lunch room. He said he did not know Conner but had known Baessler a couple of years. He also had known Mamie Fish. She had resided in the same building where the lunch room is. On January 23 Baessler came to the lunch room about 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon with Mrs. Fish. Brodhead said Baessler asked him to take care of Mrs. Fish. The witness testified Baessler said he was leaving her in Brodhead's charge as he, Baessler, was going away.

Brodhead said he had not taken charge of Mrs. Fish as it was not necessary. He said when Baessler made that remark he had been joking.

Court recessed until 2:30 o'clock.

WEST SHOKAN

West Shokan, May 8—The critical condition of John Thompson of Main street remained as practically unchanged Saturday morning. He is under the care of Dr. Quinn and Mrs. Sahler, nurse, of Phoenicia. Friday Dr. Fred Snyder of Kingston was called in consultation. Helen, second oldest daughter, who attends Kingston High School, has also developed pneumonia, and after arrangements by Dr. Snyder she was removed Friday evening to Kingston Hospital. Miss Thompson was a victim of the measles epidemic and had but shortly recovered when whooping cough developed, the combination greatly weakening her physical condition. Mrs. Geyer, oldest daughter, and Louise, youngest daughter, are also ill due to the effects of measles and whooping cough. All sympathize most keenly with the stricken family.

Mr. and Mrs. William Colange were Kingston callers Friday afternoon. Mr. Colange is still undergoing surgical treatment.

Among visitors at the Ladies' Aid church quilting on Wednesday were Mrs. Louis Sahler, of Accord, and her daughter, Mrs. Howard Anderson, formerly Miss Marion East, of Accord; Mrs. Mary Moore and daughter, Mrs. Genevieve McLean, of Samsonville, and Miss Bertha Merrill, of Brown Station Heights. The affair was combined in a birthday reception for Mrs. Watson Bishop, former Aid president, in honor of her seventy-sixth birthday. Mrs. Bishop was presented with a beautiful floral remembrance of carnations and ferns by Mrs. Sahler and her daughter. She received other appropriate tokens in connection with a shower of cards and congratulatory letters. For half a century Mrs. Bishop has been connected with the local Baptist Aid Society. She with Mrs. Sarah M. Matthews took part in its first organization in the old village, with Mrs. Matthews as president.

A group of relatives and friends were entertained at a surprise birthday party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert North, Wednesday evening at North Main Street Heights.

Mrs. Charles H. Weidner and Mrs. James Burgher were delegates at Eastern District Home Bureau session held Wednesday in Kingston. A very wonderful meeting was reported. Both Mrs. Weidner and Mrs. Burgher acted as living models in the style exhibition.

Raymond Kelder of West Shokan Heights, hustling young farmer, has had the orchard lot ploughed. According to old timers' recollections the sod has not been turned under before in the neighborhood of 20 years. Ray is going in for a bumper crop of corn and potatoes.

Charles H. Weidner, who was re-elected trustee at the annual meeting May 2, has hired Mrs Edward G. West as teacher for her fourth consecutive year. Mrs. Francis Ayers of Olive Bridge will return to the Brodhead school according to report. Harlowe McLean succeeds himself as trustee in that district. At Bushkill Francis Avery was also re-elected. Miss Hazel Bell of Shokan, teacher for the past two years, will not return.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Condon of Palenville paid a visit to Mrs. Watson Bishop of West Shokan Heights on Thursday afternoon and evening in honor of her birthday, the day previous.

Wednesday's rain provided a welcome relief for the existing fire hazard. The dead woods growth and leaves had become very dry due to the prevailing winds and summer-like weather.

Charles Eckert, well known Krumville road farmer, delivered a load of wood to the Watson Hollow Inn early this week.

Louis Sahler of Stone Ridge, salesman for the Globe Refining Company of Cleveland, Ohio, was in this locality Wednesday.

Frank N. Davis of Samsonville, Rawleigh distributor, serviced customers in this territory on Friday and Saturday.

Edward Crispell of Olive Bridge, veteran carpenter, who fell from a barn roof in Brodhead two weeks ago, is under the care of Dr. Quinn of Phoenicia. His condition is reported as improving.

There was a large turnout of members at the Thursday evening session of Olive Rebekah Lodge. A social hour with refreshments followed.

The public is most cordially invited to attend a card party for the benefit of Olive Rebekah Lodge to be given Thursday evening, May 11, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gaylord Ayres in Olive Bridge. Refreshments will be served.

Water rights have been secured from Constable Brothers of High Point Mountain for supply to the Dolan estate on the West Shokan Heights road.

Farmers have put to good use the days of fair weather, making ready for the spring plantings. A few about the community have their oats seeded.

Pear and peach blossoms indicate an abundant crop again this year.

Charles H. Weidner of Hickory Hill was a business caller in the county seat Friday afternoon.

A shipment to Troy, N. Y., of 500 Hickory Hill broilers was made by express from Ashokan on Wednesday.

It is reported that Mrs. Grover Winchell will succeed Miss Ethel Rikert as teacher next year in Winchell District. Mrs. Winchell is now finishing out her term at Samsonville and will be succeeded there by Miss Bertha Merrill. Both Mrs. Winchell and Miss Merrill are well and favorably known as teachers about this locality.

His many friends are pleased that Superintendent Frank Roosa of High Point Springs Farm, who is under the care of Dr. W. S. Bush, is recovering nicely from his recent illness and is able to get about some.

The Ashokan reservoir tax case has been in session at the court house during the past week and will be continued before Referee Norton. Assessor Martin J. Every was in daily attendance.

Howard Lucht, North Main street carpenter and painter, is employed by William V. Colange at his recently acquired Virgil H. Winchell property on Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schmoekel of North Main Street Heights are entertaining down-river friends at this writing. Miss Anna Leonard of Brooklyn is also making a month's stay with them for her health.

The board of inspectors of the local election board are preparing for the special constitutional amendment election to be held May 23. On Saturday, May 13, the board will set for registration. Charles H. Weidner has been the very capable board chairman for several years.

Mrs. Minnie Smith of Main street together with her daughter, Mrs. Lena Plessants, granddaughter, Ruth, and Mrs. Leona Dandrew, returned to Bridgeport, Conn., last Wednesday. Poor health is given as the reason for Mrs. Smith's return. Her fine residence is now up for sale or rent. Its location and convenience is ideal for a summer cottage.

George Coutant of Marlborough is putting up a bungalow on his lot among the residential group bordering the Watson Hollow road, near the Bushkill iron bridge. The Watson Hollow section is rapidly coming to the front as a summer colony due to its good location.

A U. S. Navy biplane flying over this section Saturday afternoon was believed to have been piloted by Lieutenant Stedman Teller, who made a number of thrilling dips and swerves over his old home at the Watson Hollow Inn. Neighbors of the vicinity were amazed at the daring and skillful performance.

Several folks from Brodhead vicinity attended the play Thursday evening in Olive Bridge sponsored by former Pastor and Mrs. Reed.

Mrs. Elwyn Davis accompanied Miss Helen Thompson to the Kingston Hospital Friday evening.

The town machinery has been working several days this week on the Bushkill road.

Fine Program for Big Variety Show

The Kingston Triangle Club has completed arrangements for its big benefit variety show to be given in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Only one performance will be given and no seats will be reserved. The doors will open promptly at 7:30.

A sensational dancing tumbling act will be presented by John Murphy and Joseph Sparling, which will prove to be a most novel and pleasing offering.

"Burlesque Third Degree in Rhyme," written and directed by Frank Oulton, will be another novel number on the big program. The cast of characters is: Detectives, John Dunn, William Heitzman, Don Dempsey, Robert Flynn, John Murphy; suspect, Frank Oulton; victim, George Rich. All of these young men are well known to Kingston audiences.

Kenneth Newell, popular local soloist and star in the "Fortune Teller," recently presented so successfully by the Kingston High School, will render several solos.

The Blue Ridge Rangers, consisting of Ray Taylor, Robert Aronstam, Kenneth and Harold Pratt, in song and music, will prove to be a very popular number.

Mrs. Alfred Weyhe, well known local dancing teacher, will personally present some of her pupils in popular dance numbers, among whom will be the O'Reilly Twins, two very clever youngsters; the Husser Girls, a group of five young ladies; Marjorie and Marion Bartlett, two talented young dancers in Scotch dances; and Teddy and Eddy Weyhe, as the Smith Brothers.

George Kent, Jr., and Henry Kohl in a skit, "Get Off my Foot," will provide plenty of good wholesome comedy.

The Cherio Girls, a group of eight young ladies, will do their part to liven up the program.

Eileen and Buddy Oulton with Margaret Galvin, under the personal direction of Frank Oulton, will provide a fast moving dance number.

A large group of Y. M. C. A. boys have been faithfully rehearsing an exceptionally clever number which will prove to be extremely entertaining and interesting.

There will also be plenty of harmony when the Triangle Club's quartet takes the stage as they have been rehearsing several numbers which they feel sure will prove pleasing. The members of the quartet are: Drs. Julius and Julian Gifford, Ralph Gurney and Clarence S. Schoonmaker.

The Youth Council Orchestra will be on hand to provide plenty of good lively musical numbers, which will prove a real treat.

Where to Find Happiness

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHERE to find happiness?
Of what are you speaking?
The less you find happiness
The more you go seeking.
Seldom the wanderer
Will find where he chooses;
For often the wanderer,
While seeking it, loses.

Where to find happiness?
But few ever reap it.
For they who find happiness
Just have it and keep it.
Never the querulous
Will ever achieve it.
For seldom the querulous
Who have it believe it.

Many have happiness.
Yes, have it not knowing.
And so, to find happiness,
Where are you going?
It may be near to you,
If you but mind it.
So look for it near to you,
And there you will find it.

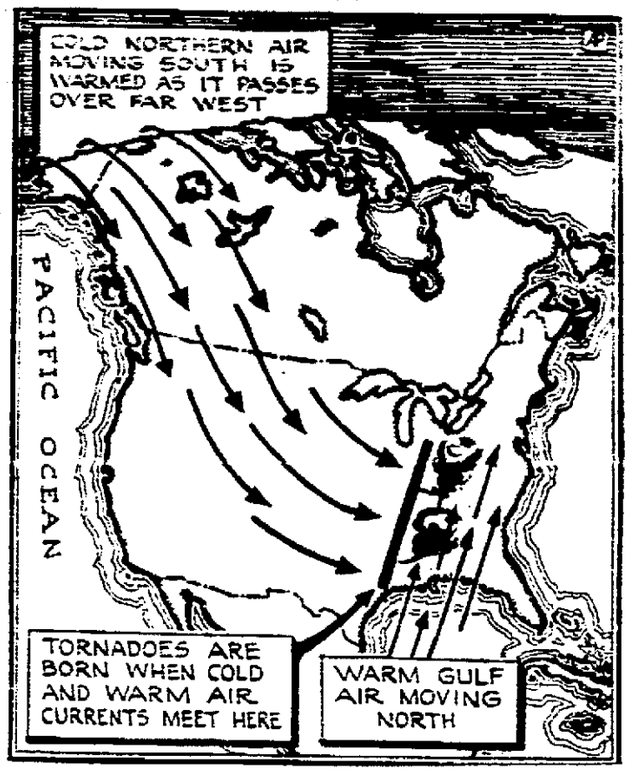
Tomadoes 'Bom' In Whirl Of Warmed-Up-North Winds Meeting Tropical Breezes



Lines on the map show how cool winds out of the north and warm breezes from the gulf region, originating thousands of miles apart, cause tornadoes when they meet over the south and midwest.

By F. B. COLTON
(Associated Press Science Writer)

Washington (AP)—Look out for a tornado when cold winds out of the north take a detour over America's far west on the way to their spring rendezvous with warm tropic breezes.

The detour takes some of the chill out of the northern gales and makes them 10 times as likely to stir up "twisters" as when they rage straight down from Canada with no preliminary warming-up. That is the finding of U. S. Weather Bureau specialists studying the whirling storms, such as those of early May, which took a heavy toll of lives in an area embracing Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Missouri and Illinois.

Temperature Just Right.

Nine out of ten of the eastward-moving air masses or "lows" that are accompanied by tornadoes are followed by cold air from the north that has been partially warmed by passage over the western part of the United States, it has been discovered.

But this warmed-up air is still cooler than the tropic winds that it meets coming from the south, and the difference in temperature seems to be just right to cause the instability of air masses that gives rise to tornadoes.

Tornadoes result from preliminary skirmishes between outposts of the advancing cool air mass and the warm air which it is invading. A tongue of cool air pushes out from the main mass, it has been found, and over-rides the warm air at a height of about two miles. It is just under the edge of this cool air tongue that tornadoes are born, apparently as the result of warm air rising and cool air falling.

Move At Car Speed.

The average tornado moves no faster than an automobile, from 20 to 68 miles per hour. It may travel a few rods or up to 200 miles, though the average distance is 25 miles. Sometimes these storms travel in erratic "jumps". Width of the path varies from 50 feet to three-eighths of a mile in most cases.

Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri have the most tornadoes—four to seven a year. The tornado season begins in early spring in the gulf and South Atlantic states, moving north later.

Spring Here, Bringing Greens Spinach, Lettuce, String Beans

Plentiful Crops of Spring Greens in Prospect Says Commissioner Baldwin; Finds Inspiration in the New Season

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, New York

SPRING—the birth of a new year. Sun and winds have sought out the remotest corners and freed them of snow and ice. Streams, now loosed from Winter's leash, laugh and gurgle on their way to the sea. The smell of earth is in the air.

Smell of the soil—that elemental, stimulating odor, unlike every other, as exhilarating today as when the first man turned the earth. Only those who have actually worked in and handled the soil recognize and appreciate it fully. It is a creative perfume that suggests teams afield, growing crops. If there were no other criterion by which to distinguish the real farmer born to the land, he can be known by his response to the smell of the furrow. It will unlock old memories grown dim with the rust of years. It will bring him dreams of the summer and harvest and recollections of the past, visions of the future.

But we must not let the exhilaration of spring erase the practical assets of the season from our minds. One of the first things the farmer thinks of in the spring is greens to cleanse his system and to renew his energy which has been slowly dissipated during the long winter.

Some wild milkweed, dandelions or horseradish leaves may be gathered and used, but modern backyard gardeners are growing their own greens by planting spinach seeds in the spring and later harvesting the succulent and nourishing leaves. For those in congested areas, where gardens can not be grown, commercial gardeners sow large fields of this vegetable to be harvested a few weeks later, packed in baskets, held cool to prevent spoiling and transported to both nearby and distant markets to supply the consumers' demands for greens.

Then comes the lettuce, ready for the table as soon as washed. And celery, soon ready to be transplanted from the beds to long rows in the fields. What backaching work this is, to walk all day on one's knees, placing these small plants at regular intervals in evenly spaced rows!

The onion plant, so necessary to season our many dishes, is started from seed or set. The long rows of these plants require practically the entire season for their growth and development.

Thus spring sees the beginning of the many interesting, tasty, health-giving vegetables which grace our tables and furnish vitamins and minerals for the growth and protection of our bodies. All sorts of vegetables, including fresh peas, green beans and radishes, then come the tempting varieties of fruits and berries. And, too, at this season of the year thousands of acres devoted to nurseries are made ready to send the city dwellers plants, shrubs and flowers to beautify their lawns and homes.

May spring infuse with the elixir of life the farmers and the tillers of the soil, that they may go forth to each day's appointed task with an unruffled calm, though clouds obscure and cold and storms discourage, sure that the earth will be quickened by the touch of spring's warm hand.

Give fools their gold, and knaves their power;
Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall;
Who sows a field, or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Early returns from the American League's western sector indicate the New York Yankees aren't going to win the pennant again as easily as their success against eastern rivals promised.

So far the Yanks have lost three out of five games in their brief tour and they even went so far yesterday as to drop temporarily out of first place as they lost the first half of a double bill to the Cleveland Indians 7 to 6. They regained it with as little delay as possible with an 8-4 victory in the second game, but this record, compared with eleven victories in 14 starts against the east, brings little encouragement to the world's champions.

Four Yankee flingers failed to hold Cleveland in check in the opener and the Indians piled up 15 blows, including homers by Eddie Morgan and Bill Knickerbocker. Charley Ruffing yielded 12 blows in the nightcap but the Yanks piled homers by Earle Combs and Tony Lazzeri on top of a four run rally that drove Clint Brown to cover in the first inning.

Detroit's Tigers went ten innings to defeat Washington 10 to 9 in the first clash but the Senators reversed the decision by hammering Lyn Rowe and Art Herring for 14 safeties and a 6-2 triumph as Walter Stewart turned in a six hit game.

The Chicago White Sox gained a temporary tie with the Yankees when they nosed out the Boston Red Six 4-3, but Henry Johnson silenced the bludgeons of the pale hose in the second clash, giving only five hits for a 3-2 triumph. The Philadelphia-St. Louis twin bill was rained out after one inning.

Giants Win Two.

In contrast to most of the other games, the New York Giants and Cincinnati Reds provided the features of the National League program with a pair of brilliantly pitched games. The Giants won them both, 1-0 and 5-0, but they hardly deserved the first victory. Bob Smith let the New Yorkers down with two hits, against five off Carl Hubbell, but one was a home run by Sam Leslie. Hal Schumacher gave the Reds only two blows in the second game and won without much trouble.

The St. Louis Cardinals, again paced by Pepper Martin, put on the day's best slugfest against Brooklyn to win the first game 12-5. They collected 17 hits, including a homer, a double and two singles by Martin. Owen Carroll again appeared to be a good influence on Brooklyn in the second game and they made six hits off their old friend, Dazzy Vance, and his successor, Bill Hallahan. Good for a 4-2 victory.

Cubs Beat Braves Twice.

The Chicago Cubs shot up from seventh place to third as they took two games from the Boston Braves, 11-2 and 5-2. They made 15 hits to aid Burleigh Grimes to the opening victory, then left it up to Babe Herman and Lonnie Warneke to win the second. The Babe batted in three runs with a homer and a double and Warneke contributed a homer.

The Phillies and Pittsburgh had an open date.

Pan-Ams Lose To Soldiers By Two

Before a large assemblage of baseball fans, the Pan-Ams opened their season at the Saugerties Road diamond Sunday afternoon by dropping a hard-fought game to the West Point Service team, 11-13. Six errors played a big part in the downfall of the Olmen, who, despite bowing to the Soldiers, outhit them 19-14.

The Pointers made two runs in the first inning, one in the second, one in the fifth and two in the sixth, thus holding a three run advantage over the brigade of "Dutch" Glaser, which turned in one tally each in the third, fourth and fifth chukkers. Then in the seventh the Service boys rallied to add six more runs to their total, these being the result of four hits, one walk and three errors. Dewey Van Buren, pitching for the Pan-Ams, was relieved in this frame by Gus Wiedemann, who held the visitors to one run and two hits during his turn on the mound.

In the ninth the Pan-Ams made a strong bid for the game by scoring five runs, but fell short of tying their opponents by two runs.

Taylor did the pitching for the Service team, allowing 19 hits. The most prolific Pan-Am sluggers were Tiano with four, Cullum and Carpenter with three apiece, Glaser, Meyers and Roosa with two each.

Irish Block Club Registers Third Win

The Irish Block outscored the North Rondout Social Club 12-7 Sunday at Wilbur, thus chalking up its third straight victory, the other clubs it defeated being the Binnewater Boosters and Kingston Trojans.

Manager Meb Lynch's boys broke the ice in the first by tallying six runs. They added three in the third, two in the fourth and one in the seventh. The North Rondouters registered two in the third, two in the fifth and three in the ninth.

For the Irishers Cullen and Letus pitched, Collins and Britt caught. Off this battery combination the North Rondouters gleaned 10 hits. The Wilbur boys made 12 hits off Komosa and Williams, who shared the pitching task for the N. R. S. Rafalowsky did the catching.

Next Sunday at Wilbur the Irishers will stack up in a return match with the Trojans.

Rosendale Loses To Kaslich Nine

The Kaslich A. C. hung up its second victory of the season Sunday afternoon at the expense of the Rosendale A. C. at the latter club's diamond. Final score of the tilt was 6-5, the result of 11 hits gleaned off Winkky by the Poolmen and eight off Flemming by the Rosendalers. Magic In Mashie Niblick Explained By Champion

This is the fourth of a series of articles in which Gene Sarazen, British and American Open golf champion, tells the average player how to cut strokes off his score.

By GENE SARAZEN
World Golf Champion
(As Told to Alan Gould)

The mashier niblick shot, one of the most important in golf, must be played with the ball closer to the right foot, with the right elbow close to the body and with a compact swing.

The ordinary players generally make the mistake of having their elbows too far out, swinging too loosely and standing too far away from the ball.

The secret lies in the proper stance, about a half swing and a firm wrist.

Strictly speaking, the shot is a short swing with the left hand. Try it with the left hand alone, to get the idea. You do not follow all the way through because you hit the ball on the down swing and take turf.

One Club for Short Ranges

The best method of practicing the mashie niblick shot is to try it from distances of 50 to 120 yards off the green, not just from one spot. Practice within this range will help your control, increase your confidence in the one club.

It is not wise to use three or four different clubs for short-range shots to the green. By governing the swing, it will be found good results will be accomplished over the range of distance I have specified.

The player who has his short game, his pitches and putting well under control, does not need to worry about being outdriven by his rival.

Ranks With Hagen, Sweetser

Let me point to Paul Runyan as a fine example. This great young player does not hit a long ball off the tee but he is a master shotmaker with two clubs, the spoon and the mashie niblick.

I consider him one of the best mashie niblick players I have ever seen, and that includes Walter Hagen and Jess Sweetser, two of the most famous specialists.

Paul Runyan, above, one of the sensations of the recent winter campaign, owes much of his success to brilliant play with the spoon and mashie niblic. Most of the star players distance him from 20 to 30 yards off the tee. Sarazen says Runyan's short game compares with that of Walter Hagen or Jess Sweetser.

SPORT SLANTS
By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

No matter what provocations Buddy Myer and Ben Chapman had for putting the slug on each other at Washington it does not seem a sound tactical policy to arouse the World Champion Yankees to fighting pitch.

As ball teams go, the Yankees are a good-natured lot. They do a lot of kidding and "jockeying", but from Babe Ruth to the lowliest bench-warming rookie they rarely exhibit a combative disposition. It has been a good many years since the Babe displayed pugilistic tendencies, and Bill Dickey's outburst at the capital last season was not a typical exhibition.

Their manager, Joe McCarthy, is not the loud or boisterous type, and even Art Fletcher, who loved a good scrap in the old days of short stopping for the Giants, has become a peaceful, home-loving character.

With their fighting blood up, however, the Yankees mauled the Senators with a greater display of baseball brutality than they have shown at any other time this season. Given a sufficient urge, they have the power to flatten anything the American League can offer by way of opposition and make another runaway race. Moreover they have the reserves ready to replace any banished combatants.

It will be recalled that the suspension of Bill Dickey for a month in 1932, instead of handicapping the club resulted in the stretching of its margin over the rest of the league.

This is not to suggest that it would be to the advantage of the Yankees literally to slug it out with their rivals, especially Washington, but it is a fact that the world champions never are more dangerous than when irritated. The Chicago Cubs will testify to the truth of that statement.

Our Pitching Forebears

If you think the Giants have been overworking Carl Hubbell, their great southpaw, this spring, take a quick glance at what some of the old time pitchers did, 40 and 50 years ago. The death of Tim Keefe, a great hurler back in the eighties, recalls the days when two or three regulars was enough pitching talent for any first-class club.

One of Keefe's greatest rivals, "Old Hoss" Radbourne, in 1884 pitched 27 consecutive games for Providence, won 26 of them and clinched the National League pennant. Then, in the "world series" with the Metropolitans, Radbourne beat Keefe twice in a row and hurled Providence to victory in the third and decisive game.

In 1888, the year he rang up 19 consecutive victories from the old 50-foot pitching distance, Keefe pitched and won four games for the original New York Giants from the St. Louis Browns in the championship series.

Going Strong at 49

Radbourne, at the time he made his wonderful endurance record, was 49 years old, an "old man" as ballplayers' ages go now. He was accustomed to playing shortstop or in the field when not pitching.

The "Old Hoss" appeared as a pitcher in no less than 72 games in 1884, but it was not unusual for regulars on most of the big league clubs of that time to participate in at least 50 contests as a starting pitcher or relief man.

Gardeners To Meet Schryvers Tuesday

Sills's Gardeners and Schryver's Lumbermen will hook up in a City Baseball League contest at the Athletic Field Tuesday evening at 6:20 sharp. The Gardeners lost their first game of the season to the Morgan Repealers, but it was by the closest of margins, 4-3, and are expected to give the Lumbermen a hard tussle. The Lumbermen will be making their first appearance of the season and from all accounts are as strong as any outfit in the circuit.

Jack Robins will do the catching for the Lumbermen this year and his presence is expected to help the team. Other new members of the team are "Dutch" Glaser, Jimmy Turck, infielders, and Dewey Van Buren, pitcher.

Paul Joyce, who tossed a good game for the Gardeners against the Repealers, is slated to be on the mound again for the Gardeners. He will be supported by either Joe Messinger or Dick Dulin. The Gardeners have received new suits and will be out in full uniform to try to capture this contest. The management of the Gardeners has called a meeting for 7:30 this evening at the Crystal Gardens. All players are requested to be on hand as the new suits will be distributed.

Race Favorites Will Renew Fight Saturday

New York, May 8 (AP).—Thoroughbred heroes of one of the greatest three-year-old duels in American turf history, Broker's Tip and Head Play were pointed today for the renewal of a rivalry that has gripped the racing world with fresh melodrama and bitter arguments.

They waged the Dempsey-Firpo battle of the turf, aided by their jockeys Saturday in the 59th Kentucky Derby, with Broker's Tip triumphant by two inches of nose in a stretch drive that has had no superior for thrills since mighty Man O'War barely beat John P. Grier in the historic finish to the 1920 Dwyer.

They are entered this Saturday in the Preakness at Pimlico along with a half dozen other survivors of the battle of Churchill Downs, and Head Play may be favored to turn the tables on the stout colt that upset Derby favorites, and in his first winning race, and added to the record-breaking achievements of Colonel Edward Riley Bradley, king of Kentucky horsemen.

No matter what else happens, however, to these two game colts in the chase for 1933 three-year-old supremacy, their struggle in the most romantic of American horse-racing classics will remain a vivid chapter in turf annals.

For the last quarter-mile, with all rivals beaten off in the first mile, Head Play and Jockey Herb Fisher struggled head to head with Broker's Tip and rider Don Meade in a terrific finish while 35,000 spectators yelled themselves hoarse. Fisher charged that Meade pulled Head Play's saddle cloth and otherwise interfered with him. Meade countercharged that Fisher struck him twice with his whip. Fisher, tearfully raging, carried his protest to the judges, who turned him down. He carried his fight with Meade into the dressing quarters with his fists.

Polish Team Wins On William's Homer

A home run by Ralph Williams in the eighth inning, scoring "Boots" Leskie, who was on base, won for the P. N. A. Club over the Uneeda Biscuit team of Beacon, 5-4, Sunday afternoon at Hasbrouck Park where approximately 1,000 fans gathered to watch the local Polish nine inaugurate its season.

Prior to Williams's circuit bingle, the score was in favor of the visitors, 4-3. Nichols opened on the mound for the Kingstonians and was relieved by Nick Huber. Ten hits were gleaned off this combination. Guleck pitched for Beacon, allowing seven hits.

The Rev. Francis P. Borowski, pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, introduced by Joe Tomaseski, started the game by throwing the first ball.

Next Sunday at Hasbrouck Park the local Polish players will meet the P. N. A., of Poughkeepsie, a team that defeated them twice last season.

Kingston Plays Saugerties Twice

The game with Saugerties High last Wednesday was postponed because of rain and so was the DUSO League game Saturday with Liberty High. This leaves two games in the hole still to be played. It was decided since Kingston had Wednesday open that Saugerties should be the opponent for that afternoon and the original schedule has Saugerties booked for Saturday, May 13, which will bring the games with the village team two in a row. Wednesday afternoon Kingston plays at Saugerties and Saturday afternoon here.

The Maroon nine had a complete rest last week. Both games were called off and so was practice for a few days because of unfavorable weather conditions. But from now on if the clouds stay away the local varsity will be a busy team trying to catch up with its regular schedule and practicing in between to smooth over the bad spots in its playing.

All Stars Win Close One From Pros, 8-

A five-run rally in the [illegible] inning saved the Kingston All [illegible] from losing to the Newburgh Professionals Sunday at the Kingston Fair Grounds where approximately 500 fans gathered to see the locals start their season. Final score of the game was All Stars 8, Pros 7.

Unable to import a pitcher who [illegible] scouring the territory north, south, east and west of Kingston, the All Stars had to call on City Judge Bernard A. Culleton, old mound luminary of the Colonials and formerly with the Pittsburgh Pirates in the majors, to do their twirling. He [illegible] three strikeouts.

The judge, although touched for 14 hits, would have gotten through with less close a shave with better support. Five errors were committed by his teammates. But despite the hitting ability of the visitors and the miscues, the All Stars came out in front by virtue of their rally in the eighth. They drove "Pep" Rose from the hill in this session, forcing him to surrender the task to Les Salmon, who allowed two runs.

BILLIARDS

Results of matches in the city billiard tournament Sunday were as follows:

Tony Pine 100, Clifton Quick 66.
Freddie Planthaber 100, Joe Marabella 26.

At the Koenig A. C. tonight there will be two contests:

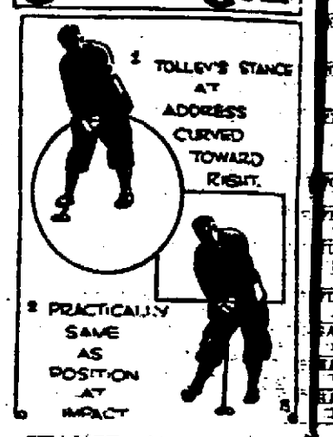
GRAPHIC GOLF



STANCE AT ADDRESS

CYRIL TOLLEY is shown here about to hit one of his tremendous drives for which he is famous. His position in the address and at the moment of impact are practically the same. One of the common mistakes of golfers generally is that they fail to keep their position constant throughout the swing. A sudden lift of the head or upper part of the body can quickly throw the whole swing out of line. Visualizing one's position at impact and assuming an address as nearly identical as possible does much to aid the golfer strike the ball accurately with a smooth swing. Resting the clubhead back of the ball and placing the left heel about opposite it; allowing the left foot to bear most of the weight while the right seeks a natural position in respect to it will work wonders along this line. In this way the golfer can be thoroughly relaxed on the back-swing and confident that the down-swing will not find the ball out of position in respect to the stroke.

No Money—No Pocketbook

There is a great difference between men and women in times of famine or plenty. The "female of the species" insists upon having a handbag if she hasn't a nickel to put in it, whereas the strong and handsome sex seem to obey an unwritten law, for if they have no money they philosophically reason that they need no wallet. Since 1929 the production of women's purses and bags has declined only 7,000,000; from 40,000,000, while men's pocketbooks dropped from 16,000,000 to 2,000,000 and billfolders from 5,000,000 to 2,500,000.

Free Potbound Plants

Plants that have been kept in the conservatory all winter often become pot-bound in the spring. Ferns palms, rubber plants, and some of the succulent growing indoor plants should be transplanted to larger pots. Use fairly rich soil well supplied with fibrous loam, leaf mold, sand, and drainage in the form of broken crockery, pots, or stones in the base of pots for drainage.—Philadelphia Ledger.

First Transfusion in 1666

The first human transfusion was performed in 1666 in Paris, says the Medical Journal and Record, by Jean Baptiste Denis. His youthful patient had been bled, according to the custom of the day, for an obscure fever and was in a state of exhaustion; nine ounces of the blood of a lamb was transfused to him, and almost at once improvement followed.

Change Place Of Training School

Camp to Be Held at Fort Niagara Instead of Plattsburg.

Change in the place where annual encampments of the Civilian Military Training Corps will take place in the coming year, as announced by Brigadier General Hugh A. Drum, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, Headquarters, First Corps Area, Boston, Mass., has been received with much interest by the members of the Kingston Unit of the C. M. T. C. Instead of going to Plattsburg, N. Y., as in the past, the Kingston boys will go to Fort Niagara, N. Y., for the training period.

The change was announced in a letter to Major Edward Hagaman Conger, commanding officer of the Kingston Unit, from Brigadier General Drum. The letter follows:

"Reference is made to your letter of April 24, 1933, relative to the location of the Citizens Military Training Camp for the Second Corps Area.

"It is regretted that the Plattsburg Barracks will not be available for the Citizens Military Training Camp this year, but it is hoped that the camp at Fort Niagara will be satisfactory.

"Very truly yours,
"By command of Major General Drum:
"(Signed) Lorenzo D. Gasser,

POSTAL DEFICIT IS OBJECT OF ATTACK

Plan to Increase Revenue and Curtail Outlay.

Washington.—Legislation designed to put the postal post office department "more nearly on a new basis of business" for the next fiscal year, is now being drafted by the house committee on post offices and post roads.

It is expected to be introduced as a part of the administration economy program either at the session after emergency matters have been disposed of or early in the next regular session.

Members of the committee are understood to be working on both ends of the problem, seeking to increase revenue and to curtail outlay. The major efforts along the first line, it is reported, will be the restoration of the former two cent rate on first class postage which was raised to three cents in the revenue act of 1932.

Three Cent Rate Causes Loss.

A recent survey conducted by Representative James M. Mead (Dem., N. Y.), committee chairman, indicated that instead of realizing a promised $170,000,000 in postal income, the increased first class rate is going to lose some $30,000,000 in the current fiscal year. He pointed out the three cent rate was one of the greatest blunders in the history of the mail service.

Experts to study the outlay of the post office department will be directed at a curtailment of air and ocean mail subsidies. In the fiscal year 1932 steamship mail subsidies totaled $21,000,000, while subventions to air transport companies engaged in carrying the mails amounted to $20,586,107.

Recently the committee compiled a comprehensive report embodying a new plan of air mail payment under which subsidies would be completely abolished within five years. It is expected that this program will be included in the legislation which is to be brought before the house.

Representative Clyde Kelly (Rep., Pa.), author of the original air mail act declared that "a complete change in the method of payments to contractors must be made in the interests of justice and economy."

"Whatever justification there may be for a large subsidy as a means of establishing the new aviation industry," he said, "it is now time to look forward to the cessation of such payments and the establishment of the air mail service on a self-sustaining basis."

Deficit Mounts Rapidly.

According to Representative Kelly the record of decreased revenues in the postal service during the last three years has never been paralleled in history. In 1930, he declared, postal revenues were $705,484,000. In 1931 they dropped by nearly $50,000,000 to a total of $655,463,000, and in 1932 they declined another $68,000,000, to a total of only $588,171,000. In the two year period the aggregate loss amounted to more than $117,000,000, while in the period from 1921 to 1930 postal revenues showed an average yearly increase of nearly $27,000,000.

The post office deficit has been mounting swiftly, according to figures compiled by the department.

In 1929 there was a gross deficiency of $85,000,000, including payments for air and ocean mails subsidies, franked mail service and nonpostal functions, while in 1932 the deficit, on the same gross basis, jumped to $205,000,000—an increase in the red of $120,000,000.

The 1929 net deficit, representing the outgo for purely postal purposes against the income from postal services, amounted to $56,000,000. The 1932 net deficit was $152,000,000.

Rumanian Drops Into Jaws of Starving Wolves

Bucharest.—New stories of savage wolf packs made daring by the cold and absence of game are being published daily. Near Kronstadt a farmer called Arun Belaian was attacked by three wolves in the forest. Although unarmed, he put up a brave defense with a stick and a penknife, with which he killed two wolves, whereupon the third took to flight.

Near Queen Marie's castle of Balcik, a peasant and his thirteen-year-old son were set upon by a pack of wolves. The two climbed a tree safely, but the wolves waited below all day long. As night fell the man strapped his son to a branch so that he should not fall from exhaustion. He was trying to do the same for himself but he slipped and fell and was instantly torn to pieces.

Next day peasants found his bones and clothing at the foot of the tree. The boy who was half dead from cold and terror, was taken to a hospital.

Washington's Home Gets Paving From England

Whitehaven, England.—Paving from a sandstone quarry here has been sent to Mount Vernon, Va., to renew similar paving at Washington's house there. Red sandstone from this area of Cumberland was used in the building of the house.

The paving, of an unusually even texture, is of a cream color, and is difficult to duplicate. The quarries of the Whitehaven district have long been celebrated for their stone.

Waterwagon Burns

Portland, Ore.—The water wagon caught fire recently. Engine trouble developed and flames soon enveloped the city street flusher. Firemen put out the blaze and towed the disabled truck to a garage.

Local Vegetables Coming to Market

Some of the first local vegetables, spinach and rhubarb, can now be purchased in the market, according to the marketing service of the Ulster County Farm Bureau. These will be available in quantity in two weeks and a much more desirable product is promised home-grown produce will help local truck consumers. The Farm Bureau is planning to serve the consuming public with the availability of locally produced fruits and vegetables, during the entire season, by frequent news releases. The Farm Bureau feels that all local consumers would prefer purchasing the fresh, home-grown produce when in season, and will make every effort to make it known when they are in the market.

The superiority of fresh, crisp, home-grown vegetables need not be repeated. Produce shipped long distances and often packed in ice to soaked in water to restore freshness, loses much of the fine flavor found in freshly harvested vegetables. From time to time, Miss Evelyn Nance, manager of the Ulster County Home Bureau, will have important suggestions to make in regard to preparing home-grown produce to make them as appetizing as possible and save all the rich flavor and food value.

Holstein Club Sale a Success

The fourth consignment sale sponsored by the Ulster County Holstein Club and held at New Paltz on Friday, May 5, was an outstanding success. The prices received by consignors was very much lower than in previous years but the average prices were much higher than those of other sales in the state recently. The cows and heifers averaged $105.10. The general average, including 15 young bulls, one of which sold for $7.50, was $82.50. Considering the quality of the cattle offered, many of the animals were sold at bargain prices.

The bulk of the cattle were purchased by dairymen from Orange county, but many went to other dairymen in the county and some crossed the river to Dutchess. A total of 39 head were sold. The cow prices ranged from $67.50 to $225, and the young bulls varied between $7.50 and $55. The committee in charge of the sale, of which John Schoonmaker of Accord is chairman, stated that in general the results of the sale were very satisfactory. The bargain prices on some of the cows will undoubtedly attract many buyers to Ulster county.

Lights of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

One of the fears of your correspondent is that when he is somewhere else—the old home town for instance—he'll forget and think he's still in New York. Should that happen, it would be just too bad. Possibly he would get his face mussed. Certainly, the mildest thing that would happen would be that he would be told he had been brought up better. The reason for that worry is the bad manners of New York. Bad manners are contagious and your correspondent has been shuttled about, elbowed, shin-kicked, brushed out of the way and snarled at for quite some time now.

• • •

In justice to New York, it must be said that bad manners are by no means a distinguishing feature of the metropolis. Your correspondent has observed extremely bad manners in Paris, which, once upon a time, he considered a courtly and gracious city. Bad manners have been thrust upon him in the U. S. A. at points quite remote from the island of Manhattan. But bad manners seem to be more universal here. They are encountered uptown and downtown, all around the town. They prevail on Park avenue just as they do on Delancey street.

• • •

One outstanding instance is the instinctive desire of the New Yorker to get ahead of others. As has been said often before, time seems of greater value here than elsewhere. The greater the crowds, the greater the hurry. Always there are those who advance themselves by the liberal use of elbows and sometimes the old straight arm. They may be only pint size or in build resemble a certain well-known make of trucks. But they try to get ahead just the same. And in that endeavor the female of the species is far more deadly than the male.

• • •

The subways are the finest examples of bad manners to be found anywhere. The race belongs not so much to the fleet as it does to the strong. In it is absolute equality of sexes. Women and children are brushed aside when it comes to boarding a train. That is some women. Others are the ones who do the shoving aside and they are just as pitiless with their own sex as they are with mere man. Elevators in busy office buildings furnish much clinical material for those who desire to study the manners or lack of manners in New York. So do theater and motion picture lobbies. Much data can also be picked up in restaurants.

• • •

Judging by a somewhat extended survey of New Yorkers en masse—the individual New Yorker is apt to be quite another story—the New Yorker, if he is in a hurry, thinks only of himself. Traffic congestion would not be nearly so bad were not that true. In case of collision, it is perfectly good form for the guilty one to bawl out the innocent victim. That holds true whether the violent meeting is between two cars or two pedestrians. To your correspondent's knowledge a trodden corn brings forth harsh remarks about feet taking up too much room, or a glare that subdues the injured party. There are a lot of towns where your correspondent would hate to try to get away with anything like that. But it can be done here.

Much has been written about the frozen insolence of theater box office men—they are a little more human now with so many theaters dark—as well as that of waiters, doormen and others. Your correspondent is willing to bear witness to the truth of such charges. He is also willing to bear witness to the fact that the local constabulary, when informing the motoring public of errors, is none too gentle in voice or words. In fact, he could cite a great mass of evidence of bad manners. Not so much as in the past, however, since there has been no little assimilation. Hence that worry.

Judge Reduces Sentence Prisoner Gave Himself

Boston.—James M. Downey, twenty-three, judges himself too harshly. Asked by Judge Harold P. Williams to dispose of his own case when he was arraigned for stealing $11 worth of groceries, Downey said:

"Well, your honor, I wouldn't want to go unpunished for this break. I think six months would be enough."

The judge cut the sentence in half.

Chickens Scratch Up Cans of Gold

Great Bend, Kan.—Bob Rick, fifty-one-year-old farmer, was sure today that he had a fine lot of chickens.

In their pursuit of worms the chickens scratched up two cans of gold on the Rick farm near here. Neighbors said the cans contained $5,220, but Rick said his windfall amounted to "only a few hundred dollars."

Rick believed the money was buried by his father, Carl Rick, who died in 1928 at the age of eighty-four, and had been in the habit of secreting money in unusual places.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Mary Slocum

IT WAS a dream that brought out the quality of daring in Mary Slocum and won her lasting fame as the heroine of the Battle of Moore's creek.

At the outset of the Revolutionary war, the British were landing troops at Wilmington, hoping to enlist the aid of the loyalists settled in the southern states and invade North Carolina. A band of supporters of King George immediately assembled in the highlands and commenced a march to the sea to join the British expedition. Patriots, rallying from the sections above Greensboro and below New Bern, under th leadership of James Moore, Richard Caswell and Alexander Lillington planned to halt their march at the narrow bridge over Moore's creek. Among the patriots was Lieut. Ezekial Slocum, of Wayne county.

The night preceding the battle his wife Mary had a dream. "I saw distinctly," she wrote afterwards, "a body wrapped in my husband's guard cloak, bloody, dead; and others dead and wounded on the ground about him. I saw them plainly and distinctly. I uttered a cry and sprang to my feet on the floor; and so strong was the impression on my mind, that I rushed in the direction the vision had appeared, and came up against the side of the house."

Mary's only thought was that she must get to her husband. She ran out to the stable and saddled a mare, leaped to her back and tore off down the dark road, quite unaware of the dangers she risked. When the dawn broke she was already thirty miles from home. About nine o'clock, when both she and her horse were nearly exhausted, she heard the ominous thunder of cannon. Then, only a hundred yards from Moore's Creek bridge, she came upon a group of wounded men lying under some trees, and among them lay one wrapped in her husband's bloody guard-cloak!

The wounded man, it seems, was not Ezekial Slocum after all, but Frank Cogwell, a neighbor of theirs and a man noted for his way with women. Mary set to work, washing his wounds binding them up with heart leaves and administering also to the other wounded. Presently her husband did appear, "as bloody as a butcher," she said later, and duly astonished to find his wife there, holding Cogwell tenderly in her arms. He had just come from the furious charge that had routed the loyalists and prevented the British invasion of North Carolina. And when, the battle done, Richard Caswell came up and asked her how she came there, Mary Slocum answered "Oh, I thought you would need nurses as well as soldiers!"

Music Week Opened With Sunday Concert

On Sunday afternoon, under the sponsoring of the Kingston National Music Week Committee, Paul Zucca of Musicians' Union Local 215 A F of M, chairman; Leonard Stine, Kingston High School; Robert Hackley, St. James M. E. Church; Walter Kidd, Kiwanis Club; Sam Scudder, Jr., Rotary Club; Sam Mann, American Legion, National Music Week was inaugurated officially in the city. A fine program had been prepared and was well performed at the high school auditorium.

In welcoming the audience, Mr. Zucca expressed appreciation of the interest in the opening of this week of music as shown by the various musical societies of the city and by the soloists who would take part.

The program opened with the playing by members of the Kingston Symphony Orchestra, Prof. George H. Muller conducting all of the orchestral numbers, of the official arrangement of "The Star Spangled Banner."

The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Lucas Boere, pastor of the First Dutch Church.

The first half of the program was given entirely by the Kingston Symphony Orchestra which played delightfully the charming Overture to Pygmalion and Galatea by Suppe which has been played by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra this winter.

The next number was an especial musical treat for Mrs. Florence Cubberly had kindly consented to comply with the special request for the Haydn Viola Concerto in D which the orchestra played at the last Symphony concert. Mrs. Cubberly being the soloist. The growing familiarity with this exceedingly pleasing Concerto on the part of both the orchestra and audience, made it an outstanding number of the afternoon's concert. Mrs. Cubberly was enthusiastically recalled and played the closing part of the movement which included the cadenza for the viola as an encore.

The last number played by the orchestra was Luigini's "Ballet Egyptien" including all four movements—Allegro non troppo, Allegretto, Andante Sostenuto and Andante Espressivo. It was evident that the audience fully enjoyed this graceful number with its oriental coloring.

The second half of the program opened with several lovely vocal selections by the little voice pupils of Miss Sophie Schmidtkonz, the first group being sung by tiny Janet Schulz with her "Dolly, dear," and by Walter Joyce as "Mister Bunny Rabbit." The two children also sang a duet. Several group songs were then pleasingly sung by a sextette composed of Betty Entrott, Winifred Entrott, Virginia Lahl, William Lahl, John Walker and John Steketee, with Miss Marion Steketee playing the piano accompaniment.

Two songs by the Schubert Choral Club, Miss Virginia Los Kamp conducting, were especially enjoyed. The club sang Saint Saens' "The Swan" and "The Return of Spring" by Krana, delightfully. Miss Ruth Neal and Miss Schleet singing the incidental solos.

After the Schubert Club, Miss Mildred Moffatt, soprano soloist, and pupil of Robert Hawksley sang very sweetly, "Just For Today." She was accompanied by Miss Messinger.

A piano solo, "Prelude in A Minor", by Debussy was played with real musicianship by Miss Mildred Messinger, who in response to the continuing applause, played "Nocturne" by Schumann, that was lovely.

The final solo number was that sung by Mrs. Clarence Wolfersteig, "Il Bacio" by Arditi, a number giving full play to her charming soprano voice. She sang as an encore, "Lindy Lu" by Strickland.

In conclusion the entire audience and singers, led by Mr. Hackley, sang "The Doxology" and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Boere.

Members of the American Legion Drum Corps, in full uniform, acted as ushers at the concert.

MEETING OF WORKERS TO BE ON WEDNESDAY

A meeting of all the members of the Workers' Cooperative Association will be held at the Common Council Chambers on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Reports will be made by Palmer Canfield, chairman of the Executive Committee, and Peter Fisher, secretary of the association, and other officers. Various important matters will come up for discussion and consideration.

In addition, Fred M. Evans, state supervisor from the State Emergency Relief Administration will explain to the members the manner in which Work Relief and Home Relief will be handled locally in the future. Mr. Evans has been loaned by the state administration to the local bureau to put the new system in effect. Hereafter the unemployed having families and other jobless citizens of this city will be budgeted according to the needs and requirements of their respective families. An endeavor will be made to give these men the necessary amount of work to cover their family necessities according to their budget. Mr. Evans has made many friends since he has been here and hopes to have the local Relief Bureau on a satisfactory basis for the city and for the unemployed. It is important that all the unemployed attend this meeting in order to learn of the methods which will be used in the future in connection with the Work Relief and Home Relief. With about 2,600 unemployed registered it is impossible for Mr. Evans to see all of the jobless who call at the headquarters. At this general meeting all of the unemployed are given an opportunity to learn of the system which will be employed in the future in connection with the relief.

Inauguration Day on Sunday

Inauguration day has fallen on Sunday only four times since that date was fixed. It was Sunday for President Taylor in 1849, for President Hayes in 1877, for President Monroe in 1821, and for President Wilson in 1917. Had March 4 been retained for inaugurations, the next time it would have fallen on Sunday would been 1945.

Match Good for 600 Lights

A rival of the match invented by a German scientist, is a lighting-stick capable of being used 600 times. Its wax-like stem is made up of chemicals and burning gases develop when it is struck. As the burning gases raise the temperature, nitrogen gas is released in sufficient quantity to choke the flame after allowing time to light a fire or a cigarette.
